Whitehall wants to cut jobless teenagers' benefit

By Anthony Bevins, Political Correspondent

The Government's determiwork", was confirmed yesterday by a senior Whitehall source.

The Treasury has identified parental housing costs and rental allowances for young people as prime targets for cuts as part of the public spending purge, which is designed to find savings of up to £5,000m for the next financial year, 1984-85.

It was stated yesterday that the specific saving might amount to only £100m, but it was emphasized that the "incentive effects" were as import-ant as the public expenditure

Anti-Walesa campaign stepped up

Warsaw (Reuter) - A Polish Government barrage of mockery and insults against Mr Lech Walesa, the leader of the banned Solidarity free trade union, reached a new high point this weekend as the union's third birthday approached.

The campaign to discredit Mr Walesa was stepped up as the threat of a possible new confrontation open between the Government and Solidarity activists on the anniversary of the strikes which led to the union's creation.

A clandestine committee of shipyard workers has called for national go-slow starting on Tuesday if the Government has failed to start new talks with Mr Walesa today. The authorities have categorically ruled out such a meeting, linking Mr Walesa with suggestions that it should take place. The authorities appear specially sensitive to Mr Walesa's potential for exciting fellow workers and his support for Western trade sanctions.

£145m council bonus despite 'over-spend'

Councils in England are to ment claws back money from the Government, despite the huge amount by which it says they are "over spending".

The money is to be paid because the Government considers councils have underclaimed on the total of £8.300m which is allocated as rate-support grant for 1983-84.

Mr Peter Robinson, Demo-cratic Unionist Party MP for Details of how the £145m is Belfast East, said the news had to be paid are likely to be set out by the Department of Environ-ment in December. It is likely that at the same time ministers will be chiding councils for their

But he gave a warning that councils receiving the unexpected grant should not "count their chickens" in case the Government tampered with the rate-support grant system later in the year to their disadvantage

None of the £145m is likely to go to what the Government considers to be be notorious over-spenders: the Greater London Council, the London borough of Camden, and the Inner London Education Authority receive no rate support grant. Plans for reforms 'one-sided'

By Our Labour Correspondent largest Civil Service union and the editor of the union's newspaper will confront each The Government's plans for trade union legislation do not go far enough in some areas and in other aspects are too partisan and anti-union, according to an examination of the proposals published yesterday by the Social Democratic Party.

Dr David Owen, the party

leader, said that the Government was in danger of squandering the best chance to put fairness and efficiency into industrial relations with proposals that were "a strange mixture of the half-hearted and one-sided

The SDP is particularly critical of the Government's decision not to insist on secret postal ballots in the legislative plans for compulsory elections of union executives. Dr Owen said unrepresent ative elements in the unions could best be defeated by postal ballots. "Communists and Trotskyists are past masters at manipulating delegated democracy and sensible trade unionists have been fighting for many years the sort of conduct represented by the Cowley moles", he said

He was also highly critical of the Government's reluctance to bring in measures making it easier for union members to opt out of paying the political levy and of the plan to hold discussions with the TUC on self-regulating measures.

Dr Owen believed that the Government had pulled back from legislation because it had "refused to grapple with the logic of changing the way private industry contributes to the Conservative Party".

The SDP statement says the Government's intentions "must not be motivated by ideology and revenge. Democratic re-form must be seen to be fair. Instead, there is a whiff of vindictiveness about these proposals and a suspicion that the Government has not sought sufficiently to dispel, that it is out to sabotage the unions." Claiming the authorship of several of the policies put forward in the White Paper last month by Mr Norman Tebbit, Secretary of State fo Employ-ment, the SDP says it is clear that the trade unionists, 60 per cent of whom voted for parties other than Labour in the general election, want both union reform and industrial democracy.

The SDP is particularly critical of the absence of any mention of industrial deomocracy in Mr Tebbit's proposals which, it believes, goes hand-in-hand with union reforms.

On strike ballots, the party suggests that to enable unions to hold postal voting, the Govern-ment should make available funds for the compilation of membership lists. It also criti-cizes the proposal that only general secretaries with a vote on their executives will be subject to regular ballots of the There is a central theme in from the South Atlantic had complained hitterly that Port Stanley was full of foreign vessels - Danish, Dutch and Norwegian - chartered by the British government.

They were particularly angry

Mr Michael Heseltine, Secretary of State for Defence, calling the government's action "a gross act of betrayal" of the 5,000 seafacers who served as volun-teers in the South Atlantic.

Mr Slater said in his letter that he protested in the strongest possible ferms at the chartering of foreign flag mer-chant ships to carry supplies and equipment to the Falklands garrison. "Our information is that at least 12 such foreign vessels are on charter to the Ministry of Defence. Meanwhile, 1,600 scamen were without work on the merchant navy shipping register, many of whom served as volunteers with the Falklands Task Force last year.

"in addition, according to the latest figures produced by the General Council of British Shipping there are no fewer than 74 British ships laid up." He told Mr. Heseltine that since the Conservatives came to power in 1979 the British merchant fleet had shrunk from 1,200 to 820 ships, and slipped from fourth to seventh in the world "league table". He quoted Admiral Sir John Fieldhouse as saying: "I cannot say too often or too clearly how important has been the merchant navy's contribution to our efforts. Without the ships taken up from trade the operation could not have been undertaken, and I hope this message is clearly understood by the British nation."

confident last night that their moves to modify militant union opposition to the Government's proposed new labour laws would succeed at next month's annual TUC conference (our Labour Correspondent writes).

Strong opposition to right's attempts to open a dialogue with Mr Norman Tebbit, Secretary of State for Employment, on his legislative plans can be expected from several unions, including the train drivers, miners, the white-collar Association of Scientific, Technical and Managerial staff, and white-collar engineering workers and construction workers. But one of the architects of the right's initiative, Mr Alistair Graham, general secretary of the Civil and Public Services Association, said last night: "We have some good arguments to make to the Government and the public, so let us not get caught up in this Scargill-type of rubbish about people going to prison." His union has tabled an amendment to the agenda for the Blackpool congress. It is one of a series that indicate an attempt by some unions to adopt what they describe as a "more realistic" stance and That new approach is emphasized in the annual report to the Council, which is published today. It will form the basis of the keynote speech during the economic debate by Mr Len Murray, TUC general secretary.

Mr Murray will argue the council's call for a reappraisal of the TUC's approach to economic policy, and the joint policy with the Labour Party. The annual report says there was a "pressing need to undertake a careful strategic analysis of the direction and presentation of policy taking into account of the need to convince trade unionists and the public and to influence the Government." The main controversy at Blackpool will centre on whether the unions should talk to Mr Tebbit on further curbs on the unions. The CPSA amendment to a train drivers' union motion asks unions to recognize that their members would not be prepared to take industrial action in opposition to the proposed legislation.

Leaders of 10 unions which have either motions or amendments on the agenda on the subject meet at Congress House tomorrow to seek a composite motion on which they can agree and, in the case of the right wing, an agreed amendment.

The 159-mile "Quadrathon" began at 5 pm on Saturday with a two-mile swim between the piers at Brighton. It was followed by a 32-mile walk to Tunbridge Wells, and then a 37-mile bicycle ride to Brands Hatch with a further 20 laps of the circuit.

Informer's mother to plead for his wife

By Richard Ford

Mrs Eileen Hill, mother of the Irish National Liberation Army informer, Henry Kirkpatrick, is expected to meet him in jail today to persuade him to retract his evidence and

His step-father, Mr Richard Hill, freed from being held by INLA last week, confirmed that Kirkpatrick had asked to meet his mother during a visit by a member of the family. The family was awaiting permission form the prison authorities for Kirkpatrick's mother to enter the Crumlin Road jail, where he is being held.

An INLA gang which has been holding Mrs Elizabeth Kirkpatrick, aged 24, has threatened to kill her soon unless Kirkpatrick withdraws statements implicating people in terrorist crimes.

Only days before Mr Hill. and his half sister, Diane, were released after being held hostage by INLA, Kirkpatrick told his mother that he believed the terror gang's kidnapping was "a bluff". But it was reported that he had thought about reconsidering his position if the terrorists released Diane and showed their "good faith".

Mrs Hill has made several appeals to terrorists urging them to release the informer's wife. She has been held since the beginning of June after being abducted by hooded men from her parents' home in west

"I wish to God they would show her the same compassion and let her go too. Please, maybe he would see sense if they would let her go. Maybe he feels cornered and if they would only let her go, he may see sense then," Mrs Hill says.

Kirkpatrick saw a relative on Saturday in a visit arranged before the abducted pair were released from a house in co Donegal last week,

However, Kirkpatrick is in an unenviable postion. Failure to withdraw his statements could result in the death of the woman who had married only four months before his arrest. But if he does retract he faces a lifetime in prison because he has been given five life sentences after admitting murdering three members of the security forces.

He was also given 992 years concurrent in jail for 72 other terrorist offences, including eight attempted murders, six conspiracies to murder and membership of the INLA.

Instead of working on the assumption that, on average, they would be allowed 1.2 per cent growth this year provided they could meet 0.5 per cent of it themselves through "efficiency savings", health authorities now have to find cuts in their revenue and capital budgets, and cut staff by I per cent this year.

Most health authorities now fear that they are not going to have enough money to main-tain existing services. The cash cuts amount to an average 1 per cent on budgets this year, the capital cuts to 2 per cent, and the manpower targets are widely regarded as unlair since they require health authorities to reduce total staff by March 31. 1984 on a baseline date of March 31, 1983 when there was an unusual number of unfilled vacancies due to health service reorganisation.

The new cash and capital limits are a direct result of the public spending cuts announced the Chancellor of the Exchequer on July 7, one week after the DHSS had announced long term growth plans for the next decade, which allowed an extra 0.5 per cent a year on average. Those plans are described this month as a "Government blueprint for cuts directly to the districts, in private medicine" by the British Medical Association's News Review.

It argues that 0.5 per cent will not be enough to meet the costs of growing numbers of elderly people and advances in medical technology, which the Government accepts requires an extra 0.7 per cent a year more than the rate of inflation. Given that the Government is also insisting that "priority care" groups the mentaliy ill, mentally handicapped and elderly - must be protected, that must mean that the acute sector would bear

Equity to reconsider ban on Indian in British film

By Christopher Warman, Arts Correspondent

Equity has objected to granting a work permit to Victor Bannerjee, whose films include The Chess Players by Satyajit Ray, on the grounds that his part could be played by a British Asian actor. He had been cast to play Dr Aziz. The matter arose when the Department of Employment, as usual in such cases, asked Equity for its views about a permit for Mr Bannerjee. The department was referred to the union's Afro-Asian committee. which concluded that the part should be cast from resident British Asian artists.

Equity's council supported the recommendation, but some members called for the subject to be reopened, and tommorow's meeting has before it a resolution calling for the decision to be reversed.

Mr Richard Goodwin, joint producer of the film with Lord Brabourne, said yesterday that

Ban sought on fire risk cable

People are being put at risk because PVC-covered electrical cables, with high smoke and fume emission, are still being installed in public buildings, according to a leading consultant engineer.

"Every time you read a story about a bad fire, more people die as a result of being suffocated than by the fire itself." Mr David Wood, senior consultant engineer with Buckle and Partners, said.

"There is no reason why a new type of cable, which came on the market about 18 months ago, that has a low smoke emission and virtually no noxious fumes, should not be used in places like airport buildings, shopping arcades entertainment centres, hospitals and hotels," he added.

"They add only about 1.5 per cent to the cost of the electrical installations, but there has so far been no move by the Government to make their use compulsory."

Mr Michiels was a director of a department that had special responsibility for trade between the European Community and Eastern Europe. Mr Leo Tindemans, the He said that at Heathrow airport the new terminal four building had specified that PVC-covered cable should not Foreign Minister, said in a David Lean: First film weekend radio interview that some diplomats had been

Ankara veto | Muslims get infuriates party leader

Ankara (Reuter) - The banned leader of a new Turkish political party, in one of the most outspoken attacks on the regime since the 1980 coup, has accused the ruling generals of not intending to restore democ-

"It seems a return to sound democracy will not be realized at the announced date . . . it will be rather difficult to explain this to the nation, which has democracy at its heart," Mr lnonu said in a statement.

It was prompted by the virtual elimination from General elections set for November 6 of two front-running new political parties, the Social Democratic Party and the rightwing Righteous Road party.

Heavy prison sentences ranging from five to 15 years, have been passed on 13 Muslim fundamentalists accused of spreading religious intolerance and attempting to create an Islamic state. The trial lasted four weeks and is regarded as the longest of its kind in recent Yugoslav history.
The principal defendant, Mr

Alia Izetbgovic, a retired lawyer and author of the Islamic Declaration, which provided the basis for a 150-page indictment, was senienced to 14 years' imprisonment. The longest sentence, 15 years, was imposed on Mr Salih Behman. A young man, Mr Hasan Cengic, who taught at Sarajevo Islamic theological faculty and is regarded as the spiritual leader of the young fundamentalists, received 10 years.

A woman who was said to have kept one of the incriminating documents as a favour to relatives received a six-month sentence; she was the only one to be released pending appeal.

The severity of the sentences was clearly intended as a deterrent. The Yugoslav authorities have gone out of their way to point out that the Muslims were not on trial for their religious beliefs, but for misusing religion

Crumbling Cairo: Part 1

Drains fail to take the strain

one of the world's oldest and largest cities, ROBERT HOLLOWAY, Our Cairo Correspondent reports on the efforts to improve the sewcrage

"If I were ruler of Egypt, Napoleon Bonaparte is reputed to have bragged, "not one drop of the Nile would flow into the sea." There have been times this year when Cairenes wished only that the waters, blackened stinking effluent, would vanish from their streets.

Built before the Secon World War, when the city contained fewer than two million people, the sewers are hopelessly inadequate for a population which is both six times as large and better housed. Lack of maintenance, moreover, has caused silting in tunnels and the failure of a single pumping station can mean immediate and widespread flooding. Last winter, when a breakdown deprived a million inhabitants of the middle-class suburbs of Mohandessin and Giza of water and in some cases electricity for 10 days, the World Health Organization threatened to categorise Cairo an insalubrious zone and sident Mubarak appeared inder television are lights in the fetid streets to declare an emergency.

electricity mains exist. Even if the project is completed, it will merely divert, not solve, one big problem. An open drain carries more than half a million cubic metres of untreated sewage daily from the eastern districts of Cairo 90 miles through the Nile delta to Lake Manzala. While one species of fish, tillarpia, is said to thrive on the effluent, the conduit will be anable to cope with the tripling of the flow predicted in the year 2000.

Despite a legal prohibition, sewage from the west bank is now being poured into the river, only six miles downstream from the city limits.

Engineers maintain after treatment, the waste water could irrigate 100,000 acres of desert. Cairo is, however, surrounded by hills and the cost of installing extra pumps to move the sewage beyon them is considered probibitive. Tomorrow: The new metro.

Dr Helmut Kohl's Government announced over the weekend that it is to launch a media campaign to explain its defence policies and counter the disinformation" of the peace movement during the coming that autumn of protests against Nato missiles. The newspaper advertisements and information booklets are probably also meant to the increasing general confusion at home and abroad about Bonn's stand on mediumrange weapons and support of the American negotiating position. The confusion was not helped by Bonn's half-hearted attempt to revive the "walk-inthe-woods" compromise at the Genva arms talks, much to the annoyance of the Americans. It has now been deepened by the sudden and controversial demand recently by Herr Josel Strauss, the Prime Minister of on the nuclear trigger. Bayaria for a dual key, giving Bonn partial control over the new American weapons. Herr Strauss's call, jolting the political turpor that settles over West Germany in the summer, was quickly denounced by the Ministry of Defence, which said it was not considering the question. But it started a fierce debate, which many people suspect was the main aim of the ambitious and maverick Bavarian leader, on an issue that Government and opposition would have preferred to leave well alone. Until now the dual key has not been the issue it is in Britain because of the renunciation years ago by the Federal Republic of all nuclear weapons and the general concesus that Bonn should not have a finger

Some Social Democrats who oppose deployment but are now resigned to its inevitability have embraced the call for a dual key enthusiasm, including Herr Karsten Voigt, the defence spokesman.

THE TIMES MONDAY AUGUST 22 1983

THE ARTS

The future of London theatre is once again being debated: not the shows, the audiences or the recurring lack of either, but the fabric of the buildings themselves. Recently in The Times Sir Roy Strong contrasted despondently the disgraceful seats; bars and lavatories of commercial Shaftesbury Avenue with the wide-open foyers of the subsidized South Bank. But there are hopeful signs that the wherewithal may yet be found to revitalize London's great theatre heritage.

The refurbishment of the 1907 Playhouse, Charing Cross, the former BBC sound studio at the Embank-ment end of Northumberland Avenue, is to be financed through the addition of offices above. The Royal Opera House has its own proposals for development to the west of its present site. One section of the GLC has called for a paper on the inture of all London's old theatres, while another has actively solicited pro-posals for rehabilitation of a theatre, ong dark, in its own ownership, the Lyceum in Bow Street.

Most London theatres were built when the city's building line was lower, as low as it thankfully still is in Shaftesbury Avenue or Charing Cross Road. But elsewhere old theatres are now surrounded by taller buildings from the Thirties or later. Nowhere is this more apparent than at the Lyceum, off the Strand, and at the Theatre Royal, Drury Lane, two of the three great theatres which, with the Royal Opera itself, form the Covent Garden triangle.
This triangle, if secured for the next entury, could be the crowning glory of the GLC's greatest planning legacy to London: a revitalized Covent Garden conservation area connecting London's West End theatreland via Waterloo Bridge to the arts centre on the South Bank. At all three Covent Garden theatres planning permission is the key issue if the historic fabric of each is to be maintained without unacceptably high public expenditure.

The best publicized of the three is the Royal Opera House. Here the current problem is simply how the hoard is to gain approval for enough development at the Russell Street end of their site to pay for the expensive but necessary package, at the theatre end, of stage extension plus breathing space for the audience. Already possibilities have been perceived that will provide a more neighbourly solution for the north-east corner of the Piazza than ever was possible with the new 2,000-seat theatre for which the Royal Opera House had persuaded the Government to buy this land.

It was this hoped-for home for the Royal Ballet which blighted another vision. This was for a dance theatre for all London-based companies and for all dance visitors to London. However, in February of this year, an imaginative Report on Opera and Dance from an Arts Council Com-mittee broached the subject once again. The case for such a theatre was succinctly outlined and two alterna-

> Save for the vandalism of the new dance floor replacing, rather than being laid over, stage and orchestra stalls, the damage is largely skin-deep and the auditorium still restorable. Reseated to modern standards the Lyceum could hold 2.500. This is more than Covent Garden, the Coliseum, the Palladium or Drury Lane. With a view uninterrupted by any pillar Lyceum audiences would e a 42ft wide proscenium with up to 52ft of stage beyond, enough to present modern large-scale musicals, whether home-grown or imported from Broadway.

> Thus the Lyceum stage is perfectly dequate for commercial runs of single spectacular shows while at the same time being inadequate for companies working in repertoire (there is no room on site at stage level for scenic storage or rehearsal). But ironically the Lyceum's shortcoming as a repertoire house is its commercial asset: this is a tightly planned building with no waste at either end. Once the large cost of reinstating a theatre dark for 44 years had been met the resulting building would be much cheaper to maintain for future generations of theatregoers than could be. The cost of reinstating the Lyceum could be met through development, because the Lyceum auditorium is in the middle of a block. Here it is possible both to raise the abnormally low flytower to the height needed for staging major musicals and to build lettable office space over the auditorium without compromising critical street elevations. Such a development, if judiciously planned, might well bring in enough not only to finance the restoration but also to safeguard the theatre's future

Because the GLC is both planning authority and freeholder of the Lyceum it must be possible to devise effective safeguards. However, as with the Charing Cross Playhouse, the central issues will be whether certain theatres constitute special cases and whether planning consents provide their only hope for survival other than massive injections of public money. The whole Covent Garden triangle, not only the Royal Opera. House, should be regarded as special. It is Britain's oldest surviving theatre district. If planners permit, London can now seize an opportunity which will give all three theatres new life.

However financially shaky the state of theatre, rooms above pubs continue to be taken over by aspiring new companies. Now Mike Sarne, a writer, director and former pop singer, hopes to establish a resident company at the Six Bells in the King's Road.

On the showing of his group's first play, by Jackie Skarvellis, better material is needed if the project is not to die on its feet. The subject is the backstage bitchery of a tawdry show called "Knockers". Giles, a classical actor down on his luck, shares a dressing room with Max, a flamboyant cabaret dancer, and that he was cut out for higher things - "I didn't do four years at RADA to be a legalized flasher." They have a pot-smok-ing dresser. Auberey, and a highly camp new dresser. Sylvie (short for Sylvester), who arrives on rollerskates in lurex catsuit and turban.

The scene being set, we await developments, but there are none. Max and Giles bicker, there is a minor sexual skirmish between Sylvie and Giles, the two dressers assume, briefly, the characters of the actors, à la Genet's The Maids, Giles decides to give in his notice, but is offered a renewed contract on raised pay, so he stays, sheepishly excusing his capitulation with talk of three million unemployed. With so skimpy a plot, Miss Skarvellis takes refuge in comic campery.

with the score was clean-edged but vividly dramatic, and it worked as well as anything could in this acoustic. But a similar approach had very odd results in two Bach motets in the first half. Komm, Jesu, komm never settled down - as a batty interpretative notion, treating the opening chords as a crescendo takes some beating and though Der Geist hilft was much stronger and more confident, the continual swooning over suspensions and lack of a straightforward pulse became

A minute's consultation with a biographical dictionary would provide as much information about Clive of India as Kenneth Griffith was able to convey in more than an hour and a half on Channel 4 on Saturday night, but it would not, of course, be as entertaining.

Mr Griffith, playing everybody, always seems to start obtrusively but inevitably carries us with him. His technique of "radical story-telling" means, we have come to know, that he will circle his subjects, dodging and feinting before moving in sharply to deliver a most telling kick in the pants. It is amusing even when questionable and always skilfully accomplished.

Behind every great wine, there's a ruthless man.

The French take their wine very seriously indeed. Even low-priced Vins de Pays are closely monitored by Government inspectors, who are notoriously hard to please.

Certainly, in blind taste tests, they won't hesitate to reject a wine that isn't up to standard. In fact, it can take years for a wine to be classified as Vin de Pays.

You can see that the French take a lot of trouble over their everyday pleasures. They've also taken the trouble to keep the price down.

Man's inhumanity to monkeys

By Andrew Tyler

They are known in the biomedical trade as non-human primates, as if to emphasize both their proximity to and their distance from ourselves. This ambivalence provokes a sentimentality which can make us laugh when we see them mimicking a tea party on the vicarage lawn, or choke at the sight of them caged in screeching torment. It can also provide the wherewithal to keep us alive, help us to control our vices, and make some of us rich through a trade which, in global generalities and gruesome particulars. resembles the high days of human

ln Florida a few years ago, a female vervet was accidentally caught spreadeagled in the cage wiring of a monkey sanctuary. With no keeper in attendance, it risked a scorching from the sun. A male partner took it on the back instead, by shielding her body with his own and suffering a good deal of dehydration during the 90 minutes of exposure before being released from his chivalrous posture.

Man is often flummoxed when confronted with examples of near-human behaviour in monkeys, even when he has encouraged and stimulated it himself. An illuminating episode concerns Nim. the star of a troop of chimpanzees which had been taught sign language.

Nim was reared during the early 1970s in a pillared mansion at Stanford University in Palo Alto. California, where he wore clothes, helped with the housework (including cooking, sweeping and laundry) and addressed his human fellow-students in the manual language of the deaf. From Stanford he was sent to Oklahoma Institute of Primate Studies, where, with others of his kind, he furthered his "education". The troop and its mentor, Roger Fouts. attracted enormous media interest and not a little academic controversy.

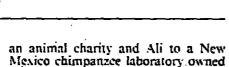

Nim was borrowed for three years by Dr Herbert Terrace, a New York researcher who intended to provide evidence supporting the belief in Nim's high intelligence. Instead he turned first sceptical, then dismissive, calling Nim's efforts at communication no more than imitative hand-flapping performed for reward.

As a result, Fours's programme fell into disfavour and its funding was reduced. The problems were heightened by the tendency of the chimpanzees, once small and charming, to grow large and less tractable. A visiting professor lost a finger when he tried to feed the baby of a surly veteran, and threatened a law suit. There were also attacks on students. Finally the programme came to a complete halt. Several of the animals, including Nim and his brother Ali, were sent to a medical institute in New York state, where they were made ready for the batch-testing of hepatitis B vaccine.

At this point, reports began to circulate that Nim had made signs indicating that he "wanted out". America's animal defenders rose up in rage. The medical institute tried to argue that the vaccine testing involved no cruelty, but they were unable to stem the flood of protest. Nim and Ali were returned to Oklahoma - although the rest of the shipment, lacking star quality, was retained.

Oklahoma, of course, still had no use for the brothers. Nim was sold to Additional reporting by John May (UK) and by a German drug company. Many stories indicating parallels between man and monkey seep from far corners of the world, just as there are numerous examples of the working partnership between the two. In southern Thailand, for example, monkeys have traditionally shinned up coconut trees to collect the crop for their owners.

A more sophisticated work project was initiated a couple of years ago at Tufts-New England Medical Centre in America by Dr Mary Willard, who trained three female capuchins - the old organ grinder's monkey - to serve like us they have strong and reckless in the homes of disabled humans. One of the animals was placed with a paralyzed car-crash victim; she was structures often poignantly mirror our reported to have responded to clicks of the young man's tongue by combing primates are rooted in the shock and his hair, spoon-feeding him and fear of recognition: a monkey which sprucing his apartment with a minia-

The capuchin people before it was caught and project still thrives, with six more animals going about their electrically stimulated business.

Among the other famous primates put into the service of man were the space chimpanzees of the 1960s. NASA's lower-primate heroes also had their teeth removed and, according to Tom Wolfe in The Right Stuff, were trained with electric shocks and punished by beatings with rubber

The first and most celebrated of the NASA chimps was Ham, who came close to drowning when his returning capsule overshot its landing point by more than one hundred miles. He died only a few months ago, in his late 20s. Since his retirement in 1963 he had spent all but a year of his time in solitary confinement at a zoo.

Not that the scientific community is_ uniformly insensitive to either the special ethical problems arising from primate use, or to the growing clamour of animal liberationists.

It is symptomatic of the increasingly heated climate that those who do go on record to challenge the liberationist logic - by emphasizing statutory obligations, pointing to the demands of the public and explaining the attempts to find alternatives - can end up receiving phone threats and attacks on their property.

One such is a British man who chooses to be identified as "an international expert in the use and provision of primates for the biomedical field" - the reticence being prompted by a recent death threat. His view of the animal "defenders" is that they are guilty of both the richest hypocrisy and dissemination of plain. ies. "Most of what I read about trapping, shipping and the diseased condition in which the animals are supposed to arrive is frankly incorrect. down their chins, they were sent In the laboratories they are handled by very professional people Compared to the treatment received by other animals, such as cattle, they fare very well.

'Ultimately you have to bear in mind that they are not little people. They are animals, and I believe we should make use of them so long as it is done humanely . . . unless, of course, the argument is that we should all be vegetarians and not wear leather shoes or permit horse racing. And that argument is nonsense."

The space race gave monkeys glamour. No such visibility or acclaim attends the use to which they are put in the related field of military research, where they are also proving to be an invaluable resource. Starting in 1957. monkeys have been placed at the sites of American atomic tests, at varying distances from the explosions and heights from ground zero. Some of those which survived were sent for observation to Yerkes Regional Primate Centre, where they developed

Radiation tests continued at numerous military and civilian institutes. In Bethesda, Maryland, for example, irradiated monkeys were taught to run a treadwheel, encouraged by the inevitable electric shock. It is estimated that 2,000 primates were irradiated at this one establishment

At another Brooks Air Force Base in Texas, a scandal arose in March, 1980 when the base's principal researcher resigned over what he considered to be the meaningless torture of the animals. Looking back over his 14 years at the base, Dr Donald Barnes sees what he described as "a period of conditioned ethical blindness". He continued: "I snapped out of it only because of the blatant redundancy of the radiation experiments."

The purpose of that experiment was to gauge the effect of radiation on human performance, including that of an irradiated, dying pilot. The monkeys were flosed with radiation. Then, with jolts of electricity shooting through their feet and vomit trickling "flying" through a variety of what roll modes, in a device known as a primate equilibrium platform. In the early days of the experiment, "death watches" were established so that the last lingering agonies of the animals could be observed. Barnes put an end to that. After 10 hours of "performance" and study, they were put to death.

The primate equilibrium platform, Barnes says, is still in use today at Brooks Air Force Base. Now it is used largely to test the effectiveness of such anti-nerve gas agents as atropine and benactzine.

Anti-nerve gas work involving primates is also taking place in Britain, although few details emerge from the Chemical Defence Establishment (CDE) at Porton Down. It is, however, on record that the CDE has a colony of at least 1,000 cynomolgus, rhesus and marmoset monkeys; that the majority are bred on the site, and that their primates have been used to test antidotes to SOMAN nerve gas. This year a scientist from the CDE's Trauma Section joined researchers from Queen's University, Belfast and the Royal Army Medical School in a study which involved the firing of "high-velocity missiles" into the heads of members of the thesus species.

The majority of primate experiments in this country are far more. mundane. Typically an ammai, confined to a metal cage, is injected with a pilot drug or compound. It will be observed, then dissected. The Home Office registered 6,186 experiments involving primates in 1981, the fast year for which figures are available. that was a slight increase on the previous year.

There are junkie monkeys in Britain it is known, however, that the batchtesting of live polic vaccine caused the deaths of about 300 cynomologus monkeys last year at Wellcome similar number at th Institute of Biological Standards and Edinburgh all three weeks). Control, where the experiment was Records for 1978, the last available year, establish that 1,342 monkeys died at Huntingdon Laboratories in Cambridge. Along with ICI and the Medical Research Council, Huntingdon is probably Britain's largest primate consumer. While it has already said that it would like to consume fewer, it adds that the 1968 Medicines Act together with the possibility of claims against their clients - the endlessly prolific drug companies - make such grim consumption necessary.

Many of these programmes operate on the assumption that the lower primates are sufficiently like us to be used as substitute models, yet suffi-ciently different that their ultimate fate is of no great concern. The ambiguity is also a potent lure: the identification of that elusive dividing line means that the creatures may be used even more efficiently to throw back the frontiers of knowledge, to purge us of disease and vice, to sharpen our weapons and strengthen our shields. To these ends there are junkie monkeys in Britain testing antidotes to narcotics, alcoholic monkey suffering delirium tremens. and monkeys in Lyons that have been smashed up in French automobile impact tests. It is in America, however, that research descends to the level of the genuinely grotesque. At Cleveland's Metropolitan Hospital in the early 1970s, 18 doctors spent six days transplanting the head of one monkey on to the body of another in order to improve our understanding of diseases of the nervous system. At the US National Institute for Neurological Diseases, chimpanzees are being hit on the head until they die in order to reproduce and determine the extent of cerebral damage in professional boxers. Scientists at the Wisconsin Regional Primate Centre have injected pregnant female monkeys with hormones which produced hermaphrodite offspring.

Wisconsin also sponsored a range of elaborate maternal-deprivation experiments, some of which involved infants enduring six weeks of solitary confinement in vertical metal chambers. A scaled-down version of this programme also ran in Britain throughout the early 1970s at the Medical Research Council's unit at Madlingley, Cambridge. Infant monkeys were separated from their mothers for 13. days, stress signs were identified and when the reunions took place it was solemnly noted that those infants which had been separated the longest showed a tendency to cling most passionately to their rediscovered

Not a lot, he said.

I have never, truth to tell, quite understood the old description of Edinburgh as the "Athens of the North". A lot of talking went on in both places, no doubt, but would even Roy Strong admit that as evidence? The only test links I can see between Edinburgh and Athens is that they are both full of unfinished monuments and retired colonels. And Greece, of course, has stuffed vine leaves, which are only a kind sideways look at he British way of life:

Not much happening on the dance floor of the Empire Rooms in Tottenham Court Road on a balmy Monday evening at 8.00. A single partnerless Rockabilly is doing a work-out at the back of the hall as the disc jockeys wrestle with the sound system. A Gary US Bonds single is smashing its way out of the recalcitrant speakers; and around the walls the chairs are filling up with middle-aged professionals. The editor of Honey is sipping a dry white, and an architect from Faling is waiting for the first Chuck Berry of the night

Around the bar area the 30 members of the northern coach party are clustering hiding their faces behind their pints. Another knot of New James Deans has assembled on one side of the floor like skaters wary of the ice. This is where the new 21s Club meets, named after the coffee bar in Wardour Street which was the cradle of British rock 'n' roll in the 1950s.

On comes Jailhouse Rock, and the Rockabilly shifts into a higher gear. He has moved centrefloor and has taken off his shirt to reveal a fine brickie's torso with 1950s, tattooing, but in the half-light thrown down by the spots there is no reading the pectoral rubric. Anyway, he has emboldened the newcomers, and now there are half a dozen couples on the floor, cool, quick, serious, well-rehearsed jivers. Suddenly a springy young man with a soldier's haircut has sprung into their midst, a devil-among-the tailors, and is making the floor look like a trampoline. He is on his back, on his front high in the air, on his side, doing a one-armed press-up. His ankles are boneless, and both his legs seem to have been kneecapped, but he dosen't mind. Like the Rockabilly, who is unimpressed, he needs a partner like a fish needs a bicycle.

The track ends, but there is no silence; only an obscure Marvin Gaye number, with somewhere in the production a drummer let loose like a man beating up a kitchen. Two brothers in Hawaiian shirts are whirling their girls nonchalantly.

At last one of those dirty, randy riffs from Chuck Berry's guitar - the kind the Stones lifted so well - and the joint is jumping. The Rockabilly is surrounded by older styles and younger practitioners; a latter-day Ted or two; a frugger, a fitterbugger, an Ali Shuffler, a Pan's People refugee, many of them engaged in tiny, private; spot-demos. And all the while not a twister in view. There is a man of 60 still sitting it out, tapping one foot rather arthritically and watching a beautiful. blond boy of 10 dance with his mother. Further down the age spectrum there is a boy of six being. cradled by an older woman. Surely to goodness the lad should be asleep. Oh, he is.

Paddy Riley and Anne Watters, two dolls from Ulster, have cleared the centre of the floor. She is being broomed backwards and forwards between his less and then thrown over his back like a scarf. Weak women get their arms ripped off', a male spectator says with something like satisfaction.

Since the demise of the RPM Club at Leicester Square, the Empire is the most popular of London's rock 'n' roll venues, although there is a growing number in the suburbs. Jeff Dexter, one of the founding decjays, says the aim of the place is to play the kind of music that everyone wants to hear, and not to make any of the punters feel they are on show. "There was one guy who came and wanted to let everyone know he was a star. So I went up to the mike and said: 'We've got a P. J. Probably here.' ... we get all sorts here. Just look around you. We get lords, ladies, school-leavers, the Pink Floyd's parents."

Skirting the perimeter of the floor is a man whose footwork bears the stamp of ballroom training, and it is strange, in such an environment, to reflect on how reviled the new beat music was by those rather grandes dame figures who handed down the starchy measures of foxtrot and quickstep to middle-class teenagers whose hearts cre elsewhere.

No less strange, for those who were teenagers in the mid-1960s, is all this exuberant evidence of how impoverished by comparison social dancing had become by then - how the twist gave way to free-form nothingness and then duly flopped into the mire of head-banging. What teenager, born circa 1950, does not remember with horror that sense of not knowing what to do when the fast numbers gave way to slow? Of wondering what the hell to do with his foal-legs, not to mention hands, when Tous Les Garcons et Les Filles de mon Age came on the turntable? The rock 'n' rollers had it worked out all along. They could drop a gear or two without any such balletic trauma. Besides which they had been holding on to their partners the whole while.

So, too, with the music itself, for all the rawness of the days before multi-track recordings, the singers really sang (they had to) and the players really played. As Jeff Dexter explains: "Today's best music leans on high technology. In those days it was made by urgency and feel. The stuff had such a marvellous cry to it."

If you doubt the truth of those words, you only have to see now the dancing at the Empire loses its fire when the Beatles and Stones come on. It may have been a golden age for the British pop industry, but for the rock n' roller it was already a time of dross. As for the 1970s, only Bob Marley gets a look-in, with occasionally some Blue Beat and Ska. Perennualism lives in those recordings based on straight four/four times which even the most sophisticated backbeat, à la Glenn Miller, cannot dilute. The great bandleader's In The Mood remains one of the most popular of rock (yes, rock) numbers, and he would surely have been beartened to see the things it makes today's revivalist dancers get up to. Who was the lyricist who said Anything Goes? Cole Something.

MOTHER ROCKER

Katie Erskine, 35 (above) and son Edward, from Finland

I go always with my son Edward (who will be 10 in October). I am divorced now, but I still like to go out and I think it's nice for children to know where mummy goes and what she does when she goes out. We go every Monday in the holidays, not always in the term if he is tired or has got homework. He does take his toys with him - his ce invaders, you know, that sort of thing, but he is learning to dance and he likes it very much. I've taught his step-sister, who is 11. She is a really beautiful little dancer, very clever, she's even teaching me some things now. I have been going to the Empire Rooms for about a year - I used to go to another place but it closed. What I would like to say about the place is that it is very relaxed, there are no posers or phonies or fights. You don't see many groups of boys, though there were a group of Rockabillys there last week. Rock 'a' roll is the best. But it is very chauvinistic if you think about it. It is the man who pushes you around, throws you about! Rock 'n' roll is great fun, a wonderful way of dancing and it relaxes you. You always feel so good the next day. I go with a group of friends about 10 to 12 of us and it doesn't matter if we do not have partners. I don't always dress up because I can't really afford to buy all the clothes - though sometimes you can, in Portobello Market, find something. I often wear trousers. They don't get in the way-

ROARING FORTIES

It doesn't matter a bit that Tish is 10 years older than me She's a very good dancer. We met when some talent scouts came to the Empire Rooms looking for people to dance in Paul McCartney's new film Give my Regards to Broad Street. The girl I used to dance with had been chosen and this guy came up and asked if I'd dance with Tish and it worked. We were chosen, with about 12 other couples, and spent two weeks at Elstree. We've won a competition at the Empire Rooms and we came second in the All London Jive Championships . . . 1 always liked everything to do with the Fifties - the music, clothes, cars - but now I like everything from the late Forties on. I used to listen to my parents' records, Bill Haley, Bobby Darren, Bobby Vee, - then I started to watch Fifties' movies on television on Saturday and Sunday afternoons. Now I've got a stall in Camden Market where I sell a lot of Fifties' stuff every weekend. A lot of the younger people really like it. At first it may look ugly, but it grows on you... I prefer jive records to everything - Rock Around the Islands, Boogie Woogie Country Girl - and all the Andrews Sisters' stuff. You see people of all ages jiving - I once saw two old guys of 75 and 80 bopping away and dragging all the old ladies in hats on to the floor. I think that's great.

roll music fascinated me. As I got older I started going to clubs. Most of them have closed now - a lot of fights, that sort of thing, which ruined it for everyone else. Steve and I don't enter a lot of competitions, we don't go looking. We enter for a laugh really. We've just won the British Rock 'n' Roll' Championships in Nottingham, which was a real surprise. We went in for a competition at the Pink Elephant, won first prize which was a little gold medal and also a heat in the finals at Nottingham. We only had two weeks to practise, but as it happened we didn't meet until the day itself. We only managed to get a

Even in infants' school, rock 'n' couple of throws in beforehand, but we won. The first prize was £1,000. We don't do routines, that makes the dance very boring. On the floor Steve tells me what he's going to do mostly with his hands, like if he wants to push me round it's hands flat together. If he's going to throw me it's three steps in and out simultaneously, if he wants to throw me back I run up to him. I get most of my clothes at charity shops but can pay up to £30 for a Forties or Fifties, dress. We both love the Big Band sound best, especially Glenn Miller. You can jive to Bill Haley but when swing comes on you feel so bubbly, you can put your whole

My speciality is bopping. I did a lot of gymnastics before I joined up and then a lot of extensive training. so I am pretty fit. I think I find the really energetic movements a lot easier because of this - things like somersaults, backward and forward flips, rollovers and handsprings. I also do a lot of very fast foot movements. I can stay on the floor for any record and keep up the acrobatics for about five minutes continuously. If I've had a hard nod Iraun day before, I dance a lot better I started rock 'n' rolling about six or seven years ago in Leicester because it was the "in" thing. Now I take it a bit more seriously and I think people rate me quite highly. I was in Ulster for a while, but I didn't do any rock 'n' rolling there - I had far more particular duties to perform. I haven't got long in the Army now - about a year. I'd like to join the police force when I leave. I suppose if I took rock 'n' roll even more seriously, if I pushed for it I could dance professionally . . . I like the music of the late Fifties and early Sixues - the best, no question -Presley, Cochrane, Gene Vincent. And I dress in period, the old drape, winkle pickers, waistcoat and tie. Funnily enough I don't like the Big Bands - to me rock 'n' roll is the stars of the 1950s, they're the ones who influence me. I do about two hours training to music,

My first preference if I'm going to a night club is to have a good dance, and rock 'n' roll has a lot to offer musically. But for the last couple of years there hasn't been a lot to offer. think I'm a moderate dancer, perhaps a bit better than that but there are many far better than me. Recognizing the difference

The high risk of investing in doing anything new can only be justified by the prospects of high profits. These in turn depend upon how well you can keep the competitors out. It may be by capability (you can do something better than they can); or by marketing (you force them to match a high level of advertising); or by legal barriers (you have the mineral rights or the planning permission). American pre-eminence in the new things that are underwritten by marketing is longestablished. More recently, Japan has moved into a similar position for the innovations that depend upon its ability to exclude competitors in the market by greater capability.

Consequently, innovation in other countries must rely increasing-ly on legal barriers. As far as manufacturing industry is concerned, this means patents. Tragically, the way in which the patent system has been allowed to develop has made it into a reinforcement of the largest, and now increasingly foreign. firms, instead of an independent basis for investment at high risk. Few innovations can justify the uncertainty and cost of patent litigation. EMI's CT brain-scanner was the greatest advance in diagnostic technique since X-rays. The firm's troubles in obtaining and defending patents internationally may have been a factor in its loss of independence; certainly, it never received an adequate reward.

In contrast to its ancient objective of "new manufacture within this realm", the patent system now looks for absolute novelty. It is therefore only open to those who are at the very forefront of technology, which, of course, are increasingly the firms of the US, Japan and West Germany, Furthermore, the subjectmatter must not be obvious to a hypothetical individual "skilled in the art", who is assumed to know everything that has ever been published about it. anywhere, in any language.

It is impossible to exaggerate the economic consequences of this. Although it is the big breakthroughs that attract the publicity, it is through incremental innovations, the countless small changes that evolve out of what has gone before. that products that can compete in international markets are built. Failure to develop one type of protection for innovation does not mean that innovation will not happen; it means that it will take place under whatever alternative system is available, and will be geographically located where that Examination for "obviousness" bars most incremental innovation from patent protection. This type of innovation has therefore had to rely primarily upon the power of greater capability in the marketplace. In a world where the Japanese excel in this, failure to develop the patent system has handed them incremental innovation on a plate.

There are many big innovations which firms of the second economic rank are quite capable of carrying through, if only proper protection by William Kingston for their investment was available. Consider the promising petrol-elec-tric hybrid motor car. The broad combination of the elements in this (two different motors and a microprocessor) is "obvious" and therefore unpatentable.

Any investment in developing it can therefore only be made under the umbrella of capability. Even America's General Electric does not regard its own huge strength as offering enough protection, because of the looming capability of Japanese rivals, without a $10 million research and development grant from the US government.

On the other hand, if protection of a really adequate kind was available, the hybrid car would offer an investment opportunity for firms much smaller than GE, in many countries other than the United States. It is the yawning gap between patents and money-making reality, which stops such investment opportunities. Consequently, in many industries, innovation no longer makes business sense, and industrial decline is inevitable.

It is to solve just this problem that a new innovation warrant system is needed. It would leave the existing patent system untouched, would run parallel to it, and it should not be administered by the Patent Office.

Like patents, warrants would confer exclusive rights for doing new things but on a quite different basis. They would deal with innovation, not invention, and would be concerned with achieved hardware rather than ideas. They would be explicitly linked to investment.

Their criterion would be bluntly commercial, and would cut through all abstractions. The conferring of a warrant would depend upon the answer to a single, simple question: Is the subject-matter of the appli-cation obtainable now in the ordinary course of trade? For instance, can you go out to a dealer and buy a hybrid ear? No? Then, an investment to develop one is warrantable. So, too, are all the incremental improvements which production managers in all industries know will be the next small step forward in their products, but for which they are now reluctant to tool up because they know that they will be beaten by competitive capability, probably from abroad.

A warrant would be incontestable and would not have to be policed by the warrant-holder. Who would prospect for minerals if the geographical limits of his licence could be called into question at any time? Yet this is no more than any present patentee is asked to do. And why should it be a crime to steal a firm's cash, but not embodied information which it has risked much to Clearly, warrants would convey far more specific market power to manufacturing firms than anything available to them at present, and they must do so if they are to generate the massive wave of new investment that is needed. What would make this acceptable is a shift from time to money as the measure of the monopoly. For administrative convenience, time might still be used for minor innovations, but for the major ones, a warrant would give its holder a monopoly until he had obtained back as profits a prescribed multiple of his investment. The "multiple" could be varied according to regional or other

Competitors could not object to generous terms in a warrant, since the more profitable an investment turns out to be, the quicker the monopoly would be ended. All the techniques for measuring the value of a warrant in terms of money could be adapted from those already used for monitoring complex defence development contracts.

The warrant system also would fit without strain into existing international arrangements. The most relevant of these, the Paris Convention, provides for equal treatment of native and foreign firms. Thus, if the US introduced warrants. Nissan would be just as entitled as GE to obtain one for the hybrid car in respect of investment in the United States. The implications for innovation and employment are obvious. Warrants, indeed, offer a dynamic alternative to protection as a means of dealing with pressure from the Shinto-Confucian world, which can only intensify in the future.

The EEC's expert, Dr Hermann Kronz, is an energetic advocate (as well as originator) of ideas for making patents more effective, and the Commission is now funding research into the warrant concept. The concept has been sufficiently explored to enable legislation to allow a trial in one country - which would cost little or nothing. In Britain, the speed with which the Government's business start-up and business expansion schemes have been adopted, augers well for how quickly innovation warrants might boost investment and employment. A case of urban heart disease the potentially perilous future for Britain's cities should visit Albu-querque, New Mexico, as I did the other day. There are 11 exits from the inter-state highway that lead to Albuquerque, and, driving along, I waited for the one which would take me to the city centre. So I looked out for the tall buildings which I expected would tell me that I was in what the Americans call the busine district. And then, when I turned off the highway, an extraordinary and, to me, appalling sight met my eyes.

It was in the middle of the day:

but, instead of being among busy streets of busding people, I found myself in a dead city. There were hardly any shops. The buildings consisted almost entirely of massive banks, looking like fortresses and often constructed without windows. What little motor traffic there was appeared to be composed dispropor-tionately of armoured vehicles conveying money from one bank to another. Most eerie of all, there seemed to be a strange absence of human beings walking about.

Clearly, anyone who could afford to do so had got out of the city centre

I explored further. Here and there did see groups of men, mainly lispanic and apparently unemoyed. On Central Avenue, which looked as if it might once have been the city's main thoroughfare, there were drunks and there were pornographic bookstores. It was lear that anyone who could afford to do so had got out of the city centre, which was now the domain the deprived and depraved. Albuquerque, with a population of 330,000, was no longer a city with a iving heart. After leaving Albuquerque, resumed reading a new book which Penguin has just sent me. Inside the Inner City, by Paul Harrison, documents in degrading detail what in recent years has happened to the London Borough of Hackney. It describes the massive increase in poverty that was created in these lower depths of England's capital city a new under-class almost entirely lacking in hope.

Public services are inadequate, unemployment grinds down a huge section of the population, rampant crime imposes a daily hazard even on the very poorest crammed into the vilest housing. The greatest ambition of far too many people who are forced to live in Hackney is to go and live somewhere else. The population is falling and even directly comparable, Hackney is on directly comparable, Hackney is on its way to becoming a British version of downtown Albuquerque, a no-go area for almost all except those compelled to remain there; and there are many other piaces in Britain where life is just as

This state of affairs has not come about by accident. The process was tellingly traced in an article I read on the very day I visited Albuquerque. It was published in, of all newspapers, The Wall Street Journal. This, in part, is what it said:
"In the late 1960s and 1970s, there was a national consensus that no one in America should have to go to bed hungry. While it was Lyndon Johnson who launched and publicized the war on poverty, many of its most important components were expanded under Richard Nixon.... There was a clear, steady trend away from the majority's long and shameful disregard of the other, hidden America of hard-core hopelessness... But for those whose feelings were accurately reflected by the New Right, it was a cause of concern. Big government was coddling the poor while soaking the

"While Administration policies prolonged and deepened the worst recession since the end of World War II. Administration policy also cut back systematically on programs that might help compensate for the bad times.... The Administration has a clear sense of its constituency, and the poor are not included." Those words apply precisely to the condition of the poor who live in the inner cities of Britain. Here too, governments of both parties once made it their objective to destroy the underlying causes of poverty. They were not always successful: sometimes their efforts were inadequate or incompetent. At any rate, though, the will and the intention were there.

Now they are not. The view in government depart-ments responsible for easing the lot of the poor is that many of them are shiftless good-for-nothings, guilty of creating their own predicament and perfectly capable of changing their circumstances if only they made the effort. So resources have been reduced for the services on which they depend, often literally, for survival. Government funds have been withdrawn from the very places where they are most agonizingly needed.

if Mrs Thatcher wants to witness the logical and inevitable outcomet of the policies she is pursuing, she could do worse than take a trip to Albuquerque. If that is too far, London Transport still operates some sort of bus service to Hackney. The author is Labour MP for Manchester Gorton.

Ann Sofer

From villeins to

Does the Labour Party actually like the British people? I am beginning to wonder. Many of the left-wing analyses of "what went wrong" in the election portray a nation of people who are gullible, selfish, ignorant, prejudiced, hypocritical and generally pretty much beyond hope. "One of the most politically unsophisticated electorates in Europe", as a new Labour MP has dismissively called them.

But it wasn't always that way, runs the theory. There was a golden age when working people were neighbourly, warm-hearted, loyal, altruistic, wise and true. And in that happy time the working class was the majority of the nation, and had only (through the Labour Party) to get power to spread its moral virtues throughout society. Two things went wrong. The Labour Party betrayed the working class and the capitalist press warped its judgment.

This nostalgia for a better race of men and women is most forcefully conveyed in the writings of Jeremy Seabrook, who blames the Labour Party for having, since 1945, concentrated its appeal too heavily on individual material advance, sacrificing thereby the sense of collectivism and solidarity on which it built up its strength. The same theme runs through much of the commentary filling socialist journals this month. It has an extraordinary affinity with the old-fashioned Conservative notion that the working class, like children or servants or subject colonial peoples, cannot be 'trusted" with 100 much money. If materialism is an evil of our time (and I think it is) it is not one that is peculiarly conspicuous in the workng class.

As Barry Hindes puts it in a New Statesman article, "the traditional working class who 'automatically' voted Labour ... has been infected by affluence, consumerism and other consequences of economic growth". ("Infected?") Fred Inglis, in the New Socialist, talks about the fight which the Labour Party has on its hands against a whole host of modern enemies, which include. alongside selfishness and racism, the confusion of class solubility. A novel phrase. If class barriers dissolve, the implication is woe betide the Labour Party.

This same article also conveys a nostalgic regard for the working conditions of the past. Militancy in the miners' strike, we are told, was solid in the "traditionally mined and difficult-to-work pits", whereas there was no support in the "super pits of the highest traditional pits. the highest technology with their cynically privileged productivity deals". Message: sweat and grime and back-breaking toil produce comradeship: skilled work and an casy life breed selfishness.

The average of the selfishness of the se

key question, and no joke. It underlies the Labour Party's dilemma over the sale of council houses. The more people get the feeling of ownership, independence and competence, the less their lovalty to a collectivist movement can be taken for granted.

Yet I think it is a mistake to assume that these developments mean that people have become more selfish. One of the tragedies of our crazy electoral system is that the altruism of the majority (represented both in opinion poll data and in the combined vote of the Labour and Alliance parties) is not given effect in Parliament. Most people are prepared to pay more for good public services - particularly health and education - and are horrified at the prospect of the poorest in society, especially the old and the long-term unemployed, having to suffer even more. The massive defections from Labour were not after all to the Tories, but to the Alliance. People wanted a fairer society, but not the coercively collectivist one the Labour Party was offering.

But the Labour Party has stopped bothering to read the British character; it is part of what Peter Kellner has called "the left's elitist arrogance towards the public as a whole". In particular its categoriza-tion of voters as villains, traitors or victims is disastrous. Who sees a flattering portrait of themselves in that mirror? The villains will laugh, the traitors take offence, and the victims will seek out of self-respect to evade the identification. But building up the victim vote is the name of the game. "The only way to win" (said London Labour Briefing shortly before the election), "is to harness the despair of the unemployed, the anger of women ... the rebelliousness of youth". It didn't work, of course. The unemployed stayed at home ("a sacred cause, but a human disappointment", as Bernard Crick drily puts it); and women and young people in disproportionate numbers deserted Labour for the Alliance. Who, after all, would actually want to identify with those Labour posters showing helpless people being swept down a drain, or pathetic little children confronting a nightmare-huge ladder with a broken bottom rung?

Whether or not it is true that we are all specks of dust in the whirlwind of historical inevitability. our only chance of significance lying in coalescence in the "greater struggle"; it is a fatal misunderstanding of the British character to assume that we are happy to see ourselves presented that way.

Reagan's home team plays away The declining influence of George Shultz in favour of the President's old friend

Washington There is widely-held view in Washington that the authority of George Shultz, the Secretary of State, has been so eroded by William Clark. President Reagan's National Security Adviser, that he is no longer the driving force behind American foreign policy.

There is no doubt that on Central America, the foreign policy issue which is most preoccupying the Reagan Administration at present, Shultz is not in the driving scat. Policy is largely being formulated in the White House, where Clark has a basement office, even to the extent that Shultz first learnt about the decision to send American naval vessels and troops to the region when he read about it in the newspapers. He also appears to have been upstaged in the Middle East since his abortive mission there a month ago ta mission which he did not want to undertake and which was almost bound to fail). The President's new special envoy to the Middle East is Robert McFarlane, Clark's former deputy, and it has not gone unnoticed that his diplomatic team does not include a single representative from the State Depariment. Even in the crucial field of arms control the President is relying more and more on Clark. He now heads the key interagency watchdog committee overseeing the Geneva arms reduction talks with the Soviet Union. There has been some speculation in Washington that Shultz had become so dismayed by what was happening that he was contemplating a return to his home in California. This, however, would be uncharacteristic of him. He is not like his predecessor, the volatile Alexander Haig, who tended to offer his resigation every time he did not get his own way.

But there is no doubt that Mr Shultz is extremely frustrated and has told the President so. As a result the White House has recently been trying to push Shultz to the centre of public attention. Turf squabbles between the Secretary of State and the National Security Adviser have been taking place for years, particularly when such forceful personalities as Dr Henry Kissinger and Zbigniew Brzezinski were in what is now

Clark's Job. In his book Power and Principle Brzezinski recalls the strains which developed between himself and Cyrus Vance, invariably fuelled by a judicious use of leaks by members of their own staffs and often blown out of proportion by the press which is forever on the look out for feuds inside the Administration. Vance eventually resigned. PHS The American system of government, in which there is no collective William Clark is giving US foreign policy a distinctly domestic flavour cabinet responsibility, also lends itself much more to turf fights than the British system. Shultz, Clark and all the other Cabinet members were not elected but were given their positions by a president who remains in office for a minimum four-year term. So there is a tremendous incentive to get the President's ear and be close to him in the White House.

Furthermore, unlike Britain, there are very few career officials in top bureaucratic posts, which are filled by presidential political patronage.

Reagan: lack of interest and expertise in foreign affairs

Shultz (left) and Clark: the "team player" versus the trusted adviser These American officials, foremost loyalty tends to be to their boss whose cause they fight with the same ardour as knights battling on behalf of a feudal monarch. The present schism between Shultz and Clark - which has also been overblown by the press -differs from past feuds in one important respect. Whereas Dr Kissinger, Brzezinski and other national security advisers were acknowledged foreign policy experts,

Clark is not, nor does he make any claim to be. Before he joined the Reagan Administration in Washington, Clark had spent little time outside his native California. For him "abroad" was New York City. His disastrous performance at his Senate confirmation hearings when he was appointed Deputy Secretary of State displayed an almost total ignorance of the world outside the US. He has learnt a lot since then, but the reason President Reagan brought him into the White House was not because he valued his knowledge of international affairs but because Clark was a trusted friend who had served him loyally during his years as governor of California. Seen from the State Department, the main problem caused by Clark's ascendancy in the foreign policy field is not so much his lack of expertise but the fact that he tends to between view issues from the point of view of the domestic political impact they will have on President Reagan. The international ramifications, as in the Soviet pipeline embargo, often tend

Thus the dispatch of the fleet to Central America shows conservative Republicans that the President is prepared to be tough with Marxists in America's own backyard. The renewal of grain sales to the Soviet Union wins the support of farmers in the important Midwestern states. The friendlier line the US is now taking with Israel is certain to have an impact on the important Jewish lobby.

The problems posed by Clark's unfamiliarity with the world are compounded in the view of foreign policy specialists, by the President's own lack of expertise and interest in foreign affairs.

in the past domestically-orientated presidents working in harness with strong secretaries of state, such as the President Eisenhower-John Foster Dulles combination, have proved highly effective. But Shultz, hose main expertise is economic affairs, does not have the strength of personality or the assertive tempera-ment to make the President heed his voice rather than that of his colleague in the White House

One of Shultz's main weaknesses is his passive. low-key approach in dealing with members of the Administration. Yet it was precisely these qualities that President Reagan was seeking when he appointed Shultz to succeed the impetuous Haig. Shultz prides himself on being "team player." If Shultz had managed to achieve few major attention-grabbing accomplishments during the past year, people would no doubt now be praising his style and deft touch. But he has not. With the election campaign looming President Reagan is now more interested in action that can produce quick results. Does this mean that the professorial Shultz is on the way out? Almost certainly not. The White House is very concerned about the damage that would be caused internationally if President Reagan were to change his secretary of state for a second time. Besides, Shultz and Clark are said to like each other and do not differ on most issues. However, what the present rift does show is that the national security adviser, whoever he or she may be, is likely to continue to play a major if not always the major role in determining foreign policy. President Reagan initially set out to downgrade the job but found he could not.

With the increasing interdependence of politics and the economy, and the crosion of the borderline foreign and domestic policy, the authority of the national security adviser will inevitably

NATURAL MONOPOLIES

What is the point of privatizing expenditure programme largely stage further by noting that natural monopolies? When a natural monopoly is privatelyowned it must be regulated. If it were not, it would exploit its monopoly power and charge too much to the consumer. But, even when prices are controlled by a regulatory body, the rate of return on capital may be excessive compared to that carned clsewhere in industry, establishing a case for a special levy to reduce the dividends attributable to shareholders. Both the functions of the regulatory body and the rate of the special levy would necessarily be public policy concerns; they might generate as much political haggling and bureaucratic interference as similar issues affecting the big state-owned utilities today. So why sell off the assets to the private sector? What would be gained?

These are pertinent questions. There can be no doubt that the case for privatizing natural monopolies is more problematical than the case for privatizing competitive corporations. The differences between a heavily regulated private sector monopoly and a highly controlled public sector monopoly are not, at first sight, all that great. Since the privatization would involve administrative turmoil for management, and some disruption of pension arrangements and work-practices for employees, the change of ownership might seem at best futile and at worst damaging.

But there are differences between private sector and public sector monopolies, even when private ownership is accompanied by regulation. The typical regulatory authority is interested in prices, quality of service and profitability. These are important dimensions of management, but they are not the only ones. There is evidence. that it is other aspects which have caused nationalized industry executives most awkwardness and irritation in their dealings with ministers and civil servants over the last thirty VCATS.

In particular, decisions on investment and its financing have been subordinated to government's wider fiscal aims. This has caused several kinds of rigidity and inefficiency. A recent and important example is from trading profits instead of borrowing, although the expected rate of return on investment would be high enough to repay any loans in future and so justify the borrowing option. As a result telephone charges are higher than would otherwise be the case.

This may or may not be a bad thing, but it is surely right in principle for the management of a business to have more say in the pattern of its investment financing than outsiders. In this context Treasury civil servants, who set British Telecom's external financing limit in relation to the desired level of total public sector borrowing, are outsiders.

Perhaps even more harmful than this form of government interference has been the practice of varying nationlized industries' capital expenditure in order to regulate aggregate demand. The original idea, which dates back to Keynes' advocacy of a "somewhat comprehensive socialization of investment" in The General Theory, was that the Government could boost a depressed economy by raising public sector investment. This was a much-used weapon in the armoury of demand management in the 1950s and 1960s. Whatever its merits in this role, it underminded the independence and efficiency of decisiontaking within the nationalized industries. Investments were timed in accordance with macroeconomic policy objectives, not in order to match customer demand. Unnecessary waste and reduced profitability resulted. If the major utilities had been privately owned, it would have been more difficult for the government to bully them in this

The central argument for privatizing natural monopolies may be summarized as the enhancement of management freedom consequent on government's reduced ability to intervene. Since prices and product standards are likely to remain at least partly - subject to regulation, this strengthening of management freedom is particu-. larly valuable in fields such as financial planning and investment-timing.

This argument applies to British Telecom and supports the Government's proposal for required to finance its capital privatization. It can be taken a lized monopolies.

telecommunications technology is advancing rapidly. In due course technological changes may allow BT to enter new businesses in information retrieval and dissemination, perhaps in collaboration with private sector companies. If BT were to stay publicly owned its scope for manoeuvre and expansion in these innovative areas would be needlessly cramped.

The granting of more responsibility to management should improve efficiency in the major utilities. But efficiency is not the only consideration. The transfer of functions and powers from politicians to managers should be seen as part of a larger process in which individual responsibility is strengthened and the economic role of the state reduced. If there is a consistent philosophy behind the present Government's approach to industrial policy, this must surely be one of its guiding principles.

But the Government should not stop at privatization. It should also, as far as possible. transform industries now dominated or monopolized by one supplier into more competitive structures. Few industries are natural monopolies in a pure sense. As is well-known, BT now has to compete with Mercury on trunk lines. There are other, more surprising cases where competition might be promoted. For example, although electricity and gas distribution are natural monopolies, electricity and gas production are not. It would be technically feasible for many rival power stations to supply electricity to the national grid, each trying to outbid the other on price. There is nothing inevitable and preordained about the CEGB dominating the production of electricity in this country.

Indeed, BT's privatization might be more acceptable if it were accompaned by convincing steps to increase competition further in the telecommunications market. But, even in the absence of such steps privatization would be beneficial. Resulated private sector monopolies may be a second-best solution compared to the competitive ideal, but they are a definite improvement on the third or fourth-best solution of nationa-

A silent intellectual cannot, by definition, be pulling

Moreover, M Laurens found the perfect red rag to wave at this particular bull: an article by M Max Gallo, a novelist who has taken service as government spokesman, telling his fellow intellectuals to pull their socks up and get down to a spot of constructive social thought. Sounding almost like some Mrs Thatcher of the ideological market place, M Gallo sternly reminded his colleagues that recourse to the state cannot and must not be the solution to every problem". France, he said, must become once more a place where ideas ferment". As if that were not enough, Le Monde followed it up with an investigation by one of its reporters, M Philippe Boggio, who wrote that the left-wing government was profoundly disappointed by the lack of support it had received from intellectuals; that it had tried in vain to seduce them with offers of "subsidies, embassies, posts of cultural counsellor or missions abroad," including, incredibly enough, an attempt to make the philosopher Michel Foucault

> That was on July 27, and in silence or protesting that they had never been silent in the first

ise that the level of ideological debate in France has declined in recent years. One, indeed, somewhat maliciously pointed out that this came close to confirming the much quoted remark of the Wall Street Journal, à propos of the government-sponsored international gathering of intel-lectuals in Paris last February, that "France is a nullity in the contemporary active world of culture"; and went on to cite M Gallo's own prose as a sad example of what he was talking about.

Others vigorously contested the charge that France is not at present "a place where ideas ferment". "Fermentations," present ": wrote Mme Hélène Parmelin, "are generally quiet and deep, what is visible on the surface being often misleading, and I cannot see, in music, in painting, in poetry, in theatre, in dance, or in literature, that this country is falling asleep as everyone insists on proclaiming ..."

M Gallo himself suggested that the left had come to power at a moment when the ideological initiative had already been seized by the right. "Is political victory", he asked, "only the belated deposit of an already question, which several writers did not hesitate to answer in the affirmative. The alliance with the Communist Party seemed, to most, especially anachronistic, for intellectuals in general are now as powerfully repelled by that party and all it stands for as in former times they were attracted by it.

For many of those who took part as students in the great would-be revolutionary happening of May 1968, not only communism but socialism itself has now become an object of contempt. This revulsion was expressed by the so-called "new philosophers" of the late 1970s. For M Jean-Edern Hallier, a member of that school of thought, "socialism and culture are metaphysically contradictory and historically irreconcilable" He maintains that idelogies of all sorts have had their day, and that "we must re-invent everything, starting with the left itself".

It transpires that while by no means all French intellectuals have deserted the left, most have. no desire to be ambassadors, and most admit to being disap-pointed with some if not all aspects of the left's performance in office. None of them, mercifully, want to be the official eulogists and apologists which (if M Boggio is to be believed) the government was hoping they would be. Intellectuals by and large, as many of them hastened to point out, feel called on to intervene politically only when they see something to criticize or to oppose. "Can one imagine the intellectuals satisfied or, worse, obedient?", asks Professor Madeleine Reberioux. For the love of France, let us hope not.

Religious viewing and the ratings

From the head of Religious Programmes, Television South

Sir, Thank you for your accurate and well-timed comments (leader, August 18) on the problems faced by religious broadcasters in ITV. May I add a couple of points.

The re-scheduling of ITV's religious documentary output to 2.00pm on Sundays take place in a carefully created climate of worry about the commercial competitive ness of ITV. Yet, on the very day of your leader, the companies reported a 22.3 per cent increase in net advertising revenue for July, following a June increase of 17.6 per cent. Peak viewing in London was the highest since 1979, and, late-night, the highest since 1977.

The facile assertion that viewers reject religious programmes should not go unchallenged. As the BBC continues to demonstrate with programmes as popular as Songs of Praise and as distinguished and revealing as much of Everyman, religious programmes, properly edited, funded and scheduled can and do contribute both ratings and distinction to the output.

While no doubt the apparent progressive rundown in resources and production values of the principal occupant of the 6.00pm Sunday slot has contributed to the negative ratings situation there, a glance at the BARB chart shows that the audience on Sunday afternoon opts finally for BBC not at 6.00pm but two hours earlier. Religion doesn't lose the viewers: it suffers, with everything else, from a bad schedule. Of course the issue now goes far beyond this particular problem and you rightly call for urgent attention to it by both IBA and BBC Governors. But it is for the churches, too, to make an urgent and severe reappraisal of their relationship with the two authorities. For too long they have accepted client status as the unspoken price of their protected position: but it is to them in the end that producers and Governors alike look to insist that this simply is not good enough.

Yours faithfully ANGUS WRIGHT, Head of Religious Programmes, Television South,

From the Reverend Canon M. M.

Supporting Mr Steel

From Lord Mayhew

Sir, Some of your readers may be in danger of confusing the views of London Liberals with those of the London Liberal Party and its chairman, Mr Darracott (August 19). This is a mistake which those who know the Liberal Party well have long since learned to avoid.

The London Liberal Party, as Mr Darracott makes clear, holds that final authority for our election manifesto should rest with our standing committee, with its majority of non-parliamentary activists, and that the manifesto should include policies approved by the standing committee, even though the Party leader and the parliamentary Party oppose them. It also believes that non-parliamentary activists should intervene in the appointment of parliamentary spokesmen: last year it called for my own resignation as parliamentary spokesman on defence. On constitutional issues, the London Liberal Party thus follows broadly the guidelines laid down by Mr Tony Benn.

Clarification of the Soviet threat

From Dr Robert McGeehan Sir, It was refreshing, in the summer doldrums, to read your two-fisted leader of August 18, which swatted both Russian expansionism and its Western apologists, the latter typified by (but not limited to) the editorials one might find in The

The analysis of "the Soviet challenge", however, begs for further conceptual clarification of that elusive bugaboo, the Soviet Threat. There can be no question that Russian policies are less then benign, but is the challenge the same

The other side of the coin of the phony cordon sanitaire thesis is the facile assumption of the utility of Soviet military power and the putative possibilities this bestows upon Moscow's capacity to engage in blackmail.

The huge Russian military machine is, of course, very unpleasant to contemplate; but what, exactly, might it do? To whom? Under what circumstances? While we have indeed been surprised by Soviet aggression from Czechoslovakia to Afghanistan, Russia's use of force remains strictly limited to cases where they think they can get away with it, excluding in particular those states protected by the Atlantic

The Soviet challenge, in the light of the strategic stability guaranteed by nuclear deterrence, is really a challenge to the Russians themselves: as a matter of direct concern within their polyglot empire, and as a gamble in the selection of potential rictims who might be assisted by Western powers.

The deeper problem we in the West must grapple with is how to identify a threat which goes beyond a challenge and – even more difficult in a time of recession and nostalgia for a failed détente - to agree on what to do about it without frightening ourselves more than our adversaries.

August 1968 is not, in my judgment, as forgotten as you suggest. What are discarded are the mistaken notions that Soviet policy is simply defensive and that "good relations" can rest upon any base less sturdy than a stable balance of

Libvan views of Chad

From Mr Nagi i Bouzareiba

Sir, The present conflict in Chad is of sufficient significance to justify concern and a place in your leader column ("Eating people is wrong", August 16). However, by accepting a series of fabricated allegations which claim Libyan intervention in Chad, and ignoring the role of the United States in destabilising the fragile stability of Chad under Mr Goukouni Oueddei's presidency, the conclusions you reach are understandably at fault.

Firstly, you overlook Libya's legitimate concerns regarding the stability of Chad, which lies on our southern borders. It is natural, in view of the American threat to the Libyan Jamahiriya which you have reported frequently, that we view the conflict there, and the foreign intervention by the United States and its allies, with concern. It appears, from your editorial, that you accept that France and the United States have a legitimate role in Chad, but we have no right to express our interest.

The Libyan position, which Western newspapers appear reluctant to report, has been consistent and clear. The Jamahiriya believes that stability in Chad is crucial to the whole of the region, and. moreover, that this is dependent on national reconciliation between the warring factions. Mr Goukouni Oueddei headed such a government of national unity, created with the help and blessing of the Organization of African Unity.

More important, Hissene Habre not only led a revolt against Goukouni's government, but did so with the direct backing of the United States. Only last June the House of Representatives intelligence committee in Washington was told by a CIA official how the agency provided $10m in funds to finance Habre's rebel forces in overthrowing Goukouni's Government. It is justifiable, therefore, to blame the United States for subversion in Chad, and for being directly responsible for the present war.

all foreign forces from that country. We continue to call for a government which will reconcile the different factions in Chad, and believe that peace and stability there is dependent on this approach.

From Mr C. M. Reddington Sir, It may well be a vain hope to try to halt the hare first set running by Mr Sparrow in Public Finance and Accountancy and now sent further on its way by your Local Government Correspondent (August 15), since the headlined conclusion that local authorities "lose" £200m buttresses some of the current prejudices about local government accountability and efficiency and I fear that it may already have passed into the realm of accepted fact. But the facts in my own authority are somewhat different and illustrate, all too clearly, the danger of drawing dramatic conclusions from figures which were originally prepared for quite a different purpose.

Liverpool is listed as the local authority with the third highest amount of unallocated administrative expenses in the country. Of the £8.8m quoted, £8.4m represents the 1983-84 partnership programme which at budget time had not been

Economics at school level

From Mr Bryan Hurl Sir, If Sir Keith Joseph would care to return to his old school next month he could sit in on the course of "Economics" here at Harrow which I, and a younger colleague, teach to each year of the sixth form: we seem to have already anticipated what is causing anxiety in the mind of one of our Old Boys.

The inverted commas were chosen with care. All reputable schools have flourishing A level courses in economics; but I cannot believe that this difficult and numerate social science is quite what is intended in the current debate. And if economics is diluted down to, say, O level standard, it becomes fairly meaningless.

For the rest of the sixth form what is appropriate is consideration of current economic problems. It demands a lot from the teacher as there is no formalised text and pupil participation is essential: its topicality and intrinsic importance have pupil appeal.

The aim in the course is to examine the source of our standard of living, the importance of economic growth, weakness of the balance of payments, worry over deindustrialisation, the reasons for the "English Disease". An inevitable conclusion to the course is the insight that many of Sir Keith's fellow MPs, of whatever political persuasion, are themselves sadly ignorant of simple economic insights. In which case we seem to have come full circle: his anxiety is iustified.

Body and mind

From Professor Margaret J. Christie Sir, Mr Garratt's reminder (August 18) that good medical practice has always involved appraisal of the patient's total environment is timely: in today's heated exchanges we tend to forget the inheritance from past millennia. At a later point (1818) in history Heinroth used the word "psychosomatic", which still serves to describe the activity of appraising the totality of a patient's

The psychosomatic approach in contemporary medicine has both clinical and research components: the former involves much which may be regarded as "art" while the latter provides the "scientific" foundations. Such foundational research, often undertaken by psychophysiologists, includes the investigation of those physiological processes and pathways whereby the effects of environmental stimuli perceived by the individual and classified as "threatening" or "worrying" - become translated into somatic disorder. This "scientific" examination of the translation of psyche into some complements and underpins the activities of the clinician: there are no . competing claims of body and

Back to basics

From Dr Kenneth Surin

Sir, Your editorial today (August 10) on the World Council of Churches seems to rest on a basic misconception. In it you argue that the Council should do more to "narrow the gap between the ordinary Christian in the pew and the council". But what if the "ordinary Christian in the pew" is serenely untroubled by the realities of racism, social injustice and political oppression? What if this Christian clings to a purely personal faith precisely as a means of averting his or her gaze from these very realities?

"He who says he abides in him ought to walk in the same way in which he walked" (I John 2:6). The way walked by Christ led him to denounce the cruel and dehumanizing practices of the society in which he lived. In walking the way of Christ, that is, in fulfilling its prophetic function, the Christian Church may be called upon in certain situations to denounce the ways of the "ordinary Christian".

Hence, the very existence of such a gap between the "ordinary Christian" and the World Council of Churches may indeed constitute living proof that the member churches of the Council are after all fulfilling their prophetic function. It is possible, therefore, that the crucifying task of witnessing to this prophetic function may require the Church to maintain the very gap that you appear to want abolished If this is true, then the World Council of Churches would do well to ignore the advice proffered in your editorial.

The essence of the old idea of penitential mortification was lost when it became the petty legalism of eating smoked salmon sandwiches instead of ham on Fridays, and made ridiculous when eating a morsel of Friday meat was regarded as an equal sin to murder. But behind those corruptions was a correct insight.

If the insight is to be regained the way will not be through the imposition of a strict rule. Legalism would once again undermine the spiritual lesson, turning it into an issue of obedience rather than of freely chosen self-control.

OBITUARY

on his return to the Philippines from exile, was for years an unrelenting opponent of President Marcos, though it was to the President that he owed his life and subsequent permission to go to the United States after he had been sentenced to death in 1977. He was 50.

President Marcos, aware of. hostile reaction in the United States to the death sentence, instructed the tribunal to reopen the trial. There followed extended legal and political moves, until the President, having vainly appealed to Aquino to forget the past and join him in building a new Philippines society, released him in 1980 to go to the United: States for heart surgery.

Aquino then accepted a Fellowship at Harvard University and did research at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology; but none of this resolved the fundamental issues hanging over him, as it were. He continued to fire broadsides

It is incumbent on newspapers to have a satisfactory system of checking that letters which they propose to publish are genuine. The need for such checks is particularly important when the subject of a letter is controversial, as it was in this case. The Daily Telegraph is should have been on guard when invited to publish this letter signed Abraham Rosenburg in view of its subject and of the now well-known actic of submitting fraudulent letters to newspapers over false letters to newspapers over false Jewish-sounding names. The published suggestion that they were so convinced was a serious and damaging one. The editor should either have substantiated it or withdrawn it.
The complaint against The Sun is up held.

Changes needed Goldsmith says

Sir James Goldsmith said yesterday that, like many other British institutions, the Press Council had been "penetrated" by people opposed to freedom and democracy, and as a result had lost credibility.

Speaking from Miami after hearing that his complaint iames said he would contii his campaign for reform of the council, which he had begun eight years ago. The Council criticized The Observer for unjustifiably bringing Sir James's name into two reports with the intention of embarrassing him by innuendo. Sir James's complaint con-cerned two articles written by Mr Michael Gillard, which respectively appeared to link him with the Italian banker, Roberto Calvi, whose body was found hanging under Blackfriars Bridge, London, and with a company run by Mr Justin Frewen, which was then under investigation by the department of Trade.

The adjudication said, in part: So far as the first story is concerned, the Press Council cannot accept that pressure of time can excuse the publication of so significant an inaccuracy which; in the context and by the conclusion drawn from it reflects unfavourably on someone's reputation.

The Press Council is not satisfied The Press Council is not satisfied that the links between Mr Frewen and Sir James, such as they were, were sufficient to justify the introduction of Sir James's name into the second story.

The Press Council, therefore, finds that Sir James's name was unjustifiably introduced into both stories.

The complaint against The Observer is upheld.

The latest observations context, is the one that places come from two researchers in the least demand on the Australia. They report that in mother, namely the female, some kangaroo populations many more males are found in An example of more male the pouch during periods of deaths in the womb is given by severe drought. In fact, the sex Dr Eric L. Charudy, a a century scientists have It is possible that the sex debated why ratios of male to imbalance arises from death in female offspring vary at the womb. According to Judith different times in populations H. Myers, of the Institute of of humans and other animals. Animal Resource Ecology at the University of British Colombia in Vancouver, one consequence of prenatal moriality of one sex would be a reduction in total productivity Such tilting of sex ratios, of offspring. In arguing some specialists believe, is a against any other control of sex ratios, she instances suggested, for instance, that various studies in which animals under stress not only pregnancy, gave birth to 38 males and 68 females whereas 72 males and 70 females. Clearly, he wrote, more sons died in utero, so both the sex ratio and clutch size altered. It might be argued in the case of kangaroos that producing excessive numbers of males acts as a form of birth control when water supplies are meager and food is scarce.

The effect would be to diminish breeding. The ratio tilts slightly in the opposite direction when the rains return and more females are pro-females. A study of 420 eastern grey kangaroos found a ratio of 136 to 100. Studies of other kangaroo populations have so far shown no such inbalance. The researchers said, however, that, the ratios seen in the two species of kangaroos that had been studied were a strong indication that they are not fortuitous, and may be found in other species. Myers said the slight preponderance of girls born to human mothers under stress was well established, since the statistics were so extensive, but that the difference was very small. Normally a very few more boys than girls are born, a difference usually attributed to the slightly greater motility of sperm carrying the male or Y

In nature, Charnov said, the tilt apparently can go toward conditions in which the animais are living. But, he added, the literature is so full of conflicting reports that the controlling elements are still uncertain

Another explanation offered FDR an excess of females in populations under stress has been that newly fertilized eggs impregnated by a male sperm are more vulnerable to genetic defects. If the male chromosome is damaged, there is no replacement. But if the egg has been fertilized by a sperm bearing the female, or X chromosome, then the egg has two X chromosomes, one from each parent, providing a sabstitute.

The Australian findings were reported by C. N. Johnson and P. J. Jarman, of the department of ecosystem management at the University of New England in Armidale, New South Wales.

Hewson on target for All Blacks

Australia ..

New Zealand13 Sydney (Agencies) – Allan Hewson's reliable kicking guided New Zealand's All Blacks to an 18-8 win over Australia at the Sydney cricket ground vesterday. Hewson landed four penalties and converted a first-half try by the centre Warwick Taylor for a total o 14 points. In contrast, Australia's David Campase failed with his four kicks at goal, altough the home side outscored the All Blacks by two tries to one. A 44.000 crowd saw the Australian forwards dominate the scrum, but fail in the kicks and mauls. The Australians, who trailed 12-8 at half-time, had 70 per cent of the possession in the second half but failed to break through the All Blacks' determined defence. Two more penalty goals in the second half gave New Zealand a 10-point lead which the Australians rarely looked capable of overcoming. Devastating finish caps Elliott's comeback

By John Wilcockson Malcolm Elliott the Common-wealth Games road race champion from Sheffield, returned to top form yesterday to win the Whitby Regatta event in north Yorkshire. He used event in north Yorkshire. He used the finishing sprint that won him five stages of the Milk Raza cauter this year to outlack a group of 20 riders at the end of a gruelling 78 miles. It was just the boost Elliott needed before travelling to Switzerland next week for the world championshus land next week for the world championships.

The hero of yesterday's race was Phil Bayton, the Kudderminster professional, who twice made long, lone breaks on an extremely hilly surface. Bayton began the action right from the start, and he led for 15 miles before being joined by nine chasers, who included last year's winner. Sid Barras, and three members of the Great Britain amateur team but not Elliott.

The front group moved to a lead

The front group moved to a lead of two minutes, and it seemed that the race was over. Starting the second of the two 39-mile laps. Bayton again went clear before the main group began to close; then 21 men came together. 30 miles from the finish.

Bayton maintained his lone lead until five miles from Whithy, when the race ended in a frighteningly fast sprint finish. David Gardiner, from Ulster, led the charge, but he was overhauled just before the line by Elliott, while Barras came with a late burst to take third place.

Tonight at Manchester, Bayton and Barras will be doing battle in the fourth race of the Kellogg's championship. Phil Thomas will be defending his overall lead. On Saturday, at Hull, Thomas con-firmed his good form by winning a 30-mile circuit race ahead of Steve Joughtn and Bayton. Also on Friday, the Dow Jones service carried a specu-lative report that Swiss sources were saying there would be a rise of $34bn in MI. If this had happened; the bears would have made enormous profits. As it is, they have lost hadly. A haif hour after the

of 1993 rose from its low of 101 3/32 to 101 17/32. The 30-year bond, the new 12 per cent on 2013, rose from 102 18/32 to 103 6/32. There will most likely be a further rise today as the bears try to cover their losses and as confidence increases on the bond markets, leading to a "window of opportunity" for bond prices, as outlined by Dr Robert G. Smith of Capital Corporation, the New York money management firm, in a hold and optimistic forecast of rising bond prices last week.

Pointing to the sort of weak corporate credit demand outlined by Dr Smith was Friday's report that corporate profits rose 14.7 per cent in the second quarter, way above "consensus expectations". It is this sort of vigorous rise in corporate profits that will play a huge role in preventing the "crowding out" that the Kaufman-Wojnilower-Yardeni say is a threat.

Looking back, one can see powerful evidence of slower money growth in America. It is slower money growth that will raise bond prices and knock the dollar - as last week's dramatic market movements

In the two months ending on June 8, money M1 rose $15.1bn and the "adjusted monetary base" (the liabilities side of the Fed's balance sheet banks' reserve and currency? rose $46n. But in the eight weeks since June 8, Money M1 has risen only $2.6bn and the "adjusted monetary base" has risen only $800m.

Other indicators of a continning tighter Fed policy include the marked stability of "non-borrowed reserve", of the banks in the past three months; the rise in "net borrowed reserves" of the banks to the recent level of more than $450m in the past two weeks; and the the rise in the federal funds interest rate from its level of 6.5 per cent maintained between last Dec-ember and May to its present range of about 9.5 per cent. It remains to be seen whether the Fed is able to stop itself from overdoing restraint in money growth. In the past three years, this has been the patter. A period of excessive money growth followed by no growth in money. There was little in money between April-October 1981 and between January-July last year. If we are entering another period of "dead stop" in money growth this will eventually stifle the recovery. But that danger is still some way off. Two factors which will moderate the effects of slower money growth on the present recovery will be the revival of the velocity of money and the emerging weakness of the Ulrike Meyfarth, of West Germany, and Tamara Bykova, of the Soviet Union are more recent duellists for wins and records, and their competition yesterday sur-passed everything that has gone before. They both set a new world record of 2.03 metres in the high jump, with Meyfarth winning on the Miss Meyfarth's 2.38 metres. Miss Meyfarth's victory reversed the world championships positions of the previous week but both women provided Crystal Palace with its first field event world record.

Jarmila Kratochvilova managed even to improve on her reputation. After her 800 metres victory on Saturday, she took on Marita Koch in the 200 metres, at which the ast German holds the world record. Miss Kratochvilova, of Czechoslo-vakia, had aiready broken Miss Koch's 400 metres world record in Helsinki, but it was the woman she was after vesterday.

She moves on to Oslo on Tuesday for an 800 metres where her recent world record of 1min 53.28sec must be in jeopardy.

The British men could not keep up the challenge of the first day when thay had promised to repeat their best result of third place in this biennial competition. Indeed it was only the sort of run on the last leg of the relay that Phil Brown has been promising all season that kept the men in fourth place, ahead of Poland.

Kriss Akabusi, Garry Cook and Todd Bennett had kept Britain in second place throughout the relay. but then Brown's contribution 44.4 seconds won the race and sent

Bland's belated breakthrough

John Bland, of South Africa, finally achieved his long awaited breakthrough on the European circuit when he holed from eight feet for an eagle three on the last green at Fulford yesterday to win the £110,000 Benson and Hedges International, Few golfers can ever have felt more relieved, for not only has Bland flattered to deceive on so many occasions on our soil, but he also came within a whisker of handling the £18,330 winner's cheque to Bernhard Langer, of West Germany, after leading by three strokes with six to play. True, Langer applied the pressure in the most magnificent manner with an astonishing inward nine holes for 30. But at the seventeenth it was Bland who made what might have seemed this morning a catastrophic error when he took three puts from less than 20 feet. By that time, Langer was standing beside the eighteenth green after completing a round of 67, and Bland was now required to 7. Bland was now required to make a birdie at the 488 yards closing hole to tie his rival, let alone win, instead, he made a sudden death ply-off unneccessary by striking a superb two from from 214 yards out. rolled eight feet past the hole and

Yesterday, in their defeat, his 95 providing the basis for Essex's imposing total of 233. It was too much for Gloucestershire, in spite of a valuant attempt to get there after an according the an uncertain start. Essex's own start left something to be desired, Goock, Giadwin, and McEwan all masscountably getting themselves out when apparently ser for big things on a good batting wicket. When Fletcher's wicket was claimed at only 110. Gloucester-claimed at only 10. Gloncester-shire's fairly innocuous attack could feel highly satisfied with the way things were going.

Phillip, who had begun rather less certainly than his colleagues, soon changed all that. He launched an assault after having taken 26 overs to-reach his 30, and in the next seven be added another 45 runs, culminating in a huge six over long on off Sainsbury. It was his last blow, Sainsbury holding a diffucult return catch off the next both, but as the innings reached its closing stages. Turner took over with an equally breezy 30, compiled in the last four overs.

Gloucestershire's beginning was circumspect, and Gooch's appear-ance as first change howler cast an early blight upon it as he persuaded both Broad and Romaines to edge the ball to David East. Hignell the ball to David East. Hignell stayed long enough to hook Gooch for six, but then chopped Ray East to cover and at 52 for three the auspices were not good.

Storold, however, remained, if in unusually restrained mood, and a partnership of 84 in 14 overs with Bainbridge put Gloucesturshire back in the hunt. By the 25th over they were marginally ahead of their host's proparess at the courvalent host's progress at the equivalent stage, but unlike Esset they had no Phillip to cut loose. Bainbridge departed five overs later, having completed a very good 50, and although Stovold and Wright struck some worthy blows they could not quite close the gap.

Rest is over for England

From Robert Pryce Hamilton

Without having invested much effort or adrenalin. England are heading for the semi-finals of the Commonwealth championships. They crushed Gibraltar 122-30 less crushed Chotaliar 122-30 vesterday, their second succesive landslide victory.

Now let the real games begin.

England play Canada in their last group game tomorrow and either Australia or New Zealand in the semi-finals. For the first time since June, they will then be up against opposition capable of extending them.

The former England coach, Tom Wisman, whose Hongkong team have now played both Canada and have now played both Canada and England, was asked to predict the outcome of tomorrow's game. "It just depends on who gets to play their game." he said. "I give England the edge in talent and international experience and Canada the edge in size and Ponare. international experience and Canada the edge in size and power."

England's women have had a much harder time. Bruised by their 43-76 defeat at the hands of Australia on Saturday, they were embarrassed by New Zealand's under-23 team yesterday. Against a side only included in the draw to fill a last-minute vacancy. England a last-minute vacancy, England were dragged through three periods of overtime and an undignified dispute over a key basket before winning 76-73. Without a fast break or much conviction near the basket, England failed to convert even one lay-up against the tough Australian defence. They had a little more success against the mobile zone of the young New Zealanders and Carol Andrew sank 31 points.

Drew Sewell had another sure-handed day for the men's team, scoring 30 points at better than 85 per cent from the field. Paul Stimpson (23), Dave Gardner (18) and Peter Jeremich (11) were the other leading scorers. conviction near the basket. England and Peter Joreguez (11) were the other leading scovers.

Swinburn in heated duel with Piggott

A crowd of 6.500 packed the enclosures at Ripon on Saturday to watch one of the most exciting day's sport of the season. Five of the six races were won by less than two length. Lester Piggott sent his followers home happy after winning the ICI Petrol Handicap on Monongelia and the Wool Selling Stakes aboard Who Knows The Garne. In the last race, the Monkton Stakes, an enthralling battle between Walter Swinburn on River Of Kings and Piggott on Danseur

The two horses were locked together for the last two furlongs. Inside the distace the odds on favourite, ridden by Piggott, looked to have the race wion, but Swinburn forced River Of Kings' head in front for a victory by a short head. As they passed the post, Piggott appeared to give Swinburn a nudge. It then looked as though the jockey stood up in his stirrups and leaned towards his colleague. Swinburn alleged that Piggott had pushed him, an heated exchanges took place as the jockeys awaited the subsequent inquiry. The Stewards took no action and the two men shook hands afterwards. Swinburn said: "It was all in the heat of the moment and yet another example of Piggott's amazing will to win at all costs." In the finish of the Great St

Wilfrid Handicap Tony Ives on Azzam challenged strongly in the last furlong, but Philip Robinson kept Never So Bold going well to win by a neck. This victory represented a fine feat of training by Robert Armstrong, as the Habitat colt had not been seen in public since disappointing in the Britannia Stakes at Royal Ascot. Never So bold will now be prepared for the Ayr Gold Cup.

Swinburn: head in front and Sandown Park. But the accolade of the afternoon must surely go to Willie Carson after his patient and determined handling of Falstaff in the Solario Stakes at Sandown. Lear Fen was withdrawn because of the firm going and El Capistrona started favourite at 9-4. As in an earlier race at Newmarket Falstaff fought hard for his head in the early stages. However Carson not only persuaded Lord Porchester's Town and Country colt to settle, but the style and strength of the jockey's finish was something at which to marvel. Gradually increasing the tempo of his driving, Carson forced Falstaff's head in front to beat Quick Work by a neck. The courage of Dick Heru's twoyear-old has now won him three of his last four races. It is good to hear that

Lakatos subtly delivers a two-fisted blow

The British 18 and under grass court championships, sponsored by Prudential Assurance, produced a remarkable boy's singles champion at Eastbourne on Saturday: Anton Lakatos, who was bore in London, of a Hunearian fabora and an Italian of a Hungarian father and an Italian mother, was unseeded but beat four seeds in consecutive matches without loosing a set. Lakatos is also unusual in that he hits two-fisted on both sides and, consequently, needed time to compensate for a restricted reach, prefers to play on Lakatos beat the left-handed Richard Whichello, 17 months his iunior, 6-1, 6-4, after Whicello had led 3-1 in the second set of a final cariched by contrasts in personality and method. Whichello, highly-strung and sometimes tetchy, sensibly tried to keep the rallies short but lacked the weight of shot to hustle Lakatos with the consistent pace that is hostile to subtlety.

Lakatos, who has composure without arrogance and confidence without arrogance and connucince without conccit, had enough time to explore a wide factical range. He defily nudged the ball this way and that and worked Whichello into vulnerble awkward positions. Lakatos plays two-fisted because his first reaches at the house for him. He racket as too heavy for him. He attributes his sudden advance to the oughening effect of more than three months of clay court tennis in Both players want to compete full-time. Lakatos is hoping for a sports scholarship that could take him to university in Alabama next month. Whichello left school last month, and will spend most of September at the National Training Courte at Buham Abber, personner Centre at Bisham Abbey, preparing for Britain's inaugural national championships at Telford in Whichello, aged 16 years and three months, and Suric Mair, six months younger each played 11 singles in two weeks, it says much for their talent and competitive resilience that they won the 16 and under championships and then reached the 18 and under finals.

On Saturday, Miss Mair was beaten 4-6, 6-2, 6-1 by Julie Salmon, champion in 1981, and top seed this time. The first set went the way it did because Miss Mair played her busiest, boldest and best tennis. whereas Miss Salmon was too diffident to exploit what is at the moment a more flexible and mature game. Miss Salmon was a set and a break down before demonstrating, with increasing authority and skill, that she was the better player.

Miss Salmon left school two years ago to play full-time. Yesterday, she flew to the United States. Miss Mair is not yet fully committed to the game. Her next summer will take in the Scottish equivalent of A levels, then she will decide what to do with the rest of her youth.

In many ways, these were encouraging chamionships. It is a sobering thought, though, that of the 22 players - 13 boys and nine girls who have won these singles titles (the event was maurgurated in 1970) only nine competed in this year's Wimbledon singles - and six of those were beaten in the first round.

The Times Guide to career training

Is there a life outside the universities?

Diversity is often said to be the hallmark of the British educational system. This is certainly true of our higher education provision. But the danger is that the variety of courses may be confusing to the uninitiated parest or student. So if, following Alevel results, you are looking for the first time at higher education outside the universities; do not be alarmed if it all seems very confusing. In reality, for the purpose of choosing a course of degree-level study, the ground rules are very simple.

Basically, outside the universities, there are two main classes of higher education institutions - the polytechnics and the institute of higher education. The important point is who awards their degrees. And the answer, almost but not quite univer-sally, is the Council for National Academic Awards (CNAA). So, for example, whether you go to Plymouth Polytechnic to study history or the neighbouring College of St Mark and St John (an institute of higher education) to study the same subject you will emerge at the end in eigher case with a BA from CNAA.

In short, if you find yourself in the middle of a crisis revision of plans following A-level results, do not bother with the politics and bureaucracy of the educational establishments but focus on partial ments but focus on particular courses. subjects or disciplines, without minding too much at this stage where they may be.

The wide range of subjects in the sciences, arts, social sciences and technologies can be sliced up in many different ways, but these days perhaps the most useful way is between "vocational" and "non-vocational" courses. Many students at the age of 18 or 19 feel ready to make a long term career decision and start training for their future. Others are intent on extending their academic and educational qualifications. It is this distinction which, in real terms, may be most important. Consequently, anyone who has submitted (and been disappointed in) an application to a university for law or accountancy or engineering or, indeed, most of the other vocational courses, should find that the course is duplicated in CNAA degrees at polytechnics or institutes of higher education.

With one or two exceptions (such as medicine) vocational courses used to be regarded as being rather less grand than the pure sciences or humanities. The realism of the 1980s, however, has quashed that, "There has been a tremendous upturn in interest in degrees which prepare the students for employment", said one careers adviser.

My own guess is that this trend will end up as the normal practice, especially as the Government has made it clear that encouraging vocational courses is its priority. A. few months ago Sir Keith Joseph wrote, in connection with mediumterm planning of non-university higher education, that he hoped "priority will be accorded to scientific

In his second article for Alevel school-leavers, Edward discusses the Fennell vocational degree courses at polytechnics and institutes of higher education and technological provision of value to industry, to the operations needs of industry, commerce and the proand the meeting the future needs of employers more generally."

So with the political trend moving in favour of vocational courses, candidates for higher trend education, even at this late stage, would be well advised to give them serious consideration. When the polytechnics were formed, it will be recalled, their main purpose was to develop courses of this type. To some extent, this is still the area in which their strength lies. Athough there is some residual elitism about the status of non-university institutions, this is often misplaced. As William Waldegrave, the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State explained last spring, "There are various nonsensical binary line nobbisms to be overcome." Probably the best example of this "nonsense" is in engineering where it is common knowledge to graduate-recruiters that a number of polytechnic courses are superior to their university equiva-lents. As John Burgoyne, of the Engineering Industry Training Board, said recently, "It really doesn't matter at all whether you happen to go to a university or a polytechic. The important thing is the quality of the individual course and whether it includes some practical experience of industry. Employers always look more favourably on those who have had a taste of real life engineering rather than those who have just done it academically." So, where many vocational subjects are concerned, a sandwich course, or one which involves a "practical placement" is usually a good plan. Almost all the CNAA engineering and technology courses are four-year sandwiches, compared with only a minority of university courses. Out-side the élite technological univer-sities (such as Brunel, Aston and Salford) students are therefore likely to do just as well on a CNAA course

Much the same can be said for business studies, where again it is the non-university institutions that have pioneered courses which incorporate practical placements. Consequently, whether it is a a mainstream degree like the one at Brighton Polytechnic which covers economics, accounting, business law and so on; a more specialist course like the one in computing in business at Huddersfield Polytechnic; or even the slightly exotic European business administ-ration course based at Middlesex Polytechnic, which involves two years study either in Rheims or Reutlingen, there is a standard one-year industrial placement for all.

Equally attractive for these vocational courses is that many of them exempt students from the examinations of various professional bodies - for example, in accountancy and personal management. There are also a number of rather unusual courses in the non-university sectors targeted on to specific career fields - for example, housing administration, information systems, and public administration.

Outside the universities, there are also the vocatioan B Ed. degrees for prospective teachers. Some vacancies still remain on these course, not because there has been a dearth of candidates frightened off by news of teacher unemployment, but because the colleges - whether polytechnics or institutes of higher education - have been tightening up their admissions

Advice on the bookshelf

Kogan Page's series of "Careers" books has three new titles, Careers in Classical Music by Nella Marcus Careers in Surveying by David Crawford, and Careers in Publishing by June Lines (Paperback, £2.50

The first covers composing, performing, teaching, administration, broadcasting, journalism, and the basic principles of music, piano tuning, instrument building and maintenance. It also has a section on competitions, vacancies, courses, and a list of useful addresses.

The same format is followed for the book on publishing, bearing in mind that it is a profession, in the words of the introduction, "with no specific entry qualifications" other than a certain amount of luck, persistence and aptitude, but it is one in which almost any area of knowledge is useful. The text points out pitfalls as well as opportunities, and has a short list of useful contacts.

Training and professional qualifications play a much greater part in surveying, and the third of these books contains a table of earnings and prospects which is far more encouraging to the beginner than anything in publishing or music. Information is a very important factor in deciding on a career, and these little books are of American-made pipelaying equipment to the Soviet Union for use in the construction of move. the natural gas pipeline from Siberia to western Europe.

The move announced on Saturday, will allow the sale of 200 pipelayers, worth £90m of no military significance (£58.8m), made by the Caterpillar Tractor Company, to go ahead after a delay of almost

The Reagan Adminstration imposed a ban on the sale of pipeline-related equipment in December, 1981, as a gesture of protest over the imposition of martial law in Poland. It was a move which caused severe strain in relations between the Mr. Shulz's favour to dampen US and its European allies who conjecture that the Secretary of were also directly affected by State was losing influence

Although the sanctions were lifted last November, and the US Commerce Department had approved the sale of the 200 pipelayers in January, Moscow had refused to complete the purchase because of the con-tinued existence of US Government controls on the deal. The Russians contended that these ration aimed at reducing econ-controls made Caterpillar an omic tension with the Soviet inteliable suppliet.

The decision to end controls on this type of equipment

After a bitter internal dispute, represents a victory for Mr the Reagan Administration has decided to lift curbs on the sale State, over Mr Caspar Weinberger, the Defence Secretary, who had strongly opposed the

> According to US sources, President Reagan decided to side with Mr Shultz because he recognized the pipelayers were contained no special high technology, and were readily available from other countries, notably Japan. Caterpriller, which has suffered a serious decline in busines over the past two years, risked losing more orders to foreign competitors i the curbs were not lifted.

> There was also speculation that the President had acted in State was losing influence US officials made it clear that the Reagan Administration still intends to retain tight controls on the sale of other high technology oil and gas explo-ration equipment to the Soviet Union despite he latest action.

today, Carisbrooke Castle Museum, Newport, Isle of Wight: Mon to Sun Nature notes

In the far north of Scotland, a few whooper swans linger on the coast all through the summer: they are often birds with damaged wings who have not gone back to breed in Norway or Sweden. On the Highland locks, the young red-throated divers and black-throated divers are almost fully grown: these are species that the English observers will only see in midwin-ter, offshore or on large reservoirs. Some of the wigeon that nest on islands in the lochs are moving south; other wigeon begin to come into England across the North Sea.

Into England across the North Sea.

Lime trees are the first to show signs of autumn, with small clusters of lemon-yellow leaves appearing in the middle of thick green boughs. At the water's edge, reeds are tall and silky. Water-mint has grown high, with its round pink flowerheads now fully open. Teasel-heads are still green, though their sharp books can already cline. The heart-shaped can already cling. The heart-shaped leaves of cold's foot are still spreading in waste places, though it is months since their flowers died and their seeds blew away. Cabbage leaves are eaten into bizarre patterns of holes by the smelly caterpillars of the large white butterfly.

The papers

Mr David Steel's recovery from post-influental asthenia canno have been helped by the demands of Liberal activists that he be stripped Liberal activists that he be stripped of his authority to decide what goes into the party's election manifesto, the Sunday Telegraph said. Given the latest Gallup Poll, which puts the Alliance ahead of Labour, it would be to the party's advantage if members preserve a judicious silence instead of following the maccelerane neth labour. instead of following the ome path taken by Labour.

The Daily Express says that motions have been raised by the inspeakable sexual attack on the ix-year-old Brighton boy as at no time since the Moors murder trial in 1966. "And people believe instinc-tively that all such acts of perversion and wickedness must tell us something about our times and society. They do." It goes on: "Evil acts have always been committed in human society for our darker and best impulses are always only tenuously controlled. But in the last four darker and the controlled but in the last few decades that control has been significantly weakened."

The facts of economic hardship in friain unearthed by MORI "may look more like prosperity than poverty to an Ethiopian", the Daily Mirror says, "but that is no excuse in Britain today. Our poverty is not hidden. It is all around us, among the unemployed, the single-parent families and the badly paid". It opines: "the voters have twice elected a government obsessed with reducing spending to pay for tax cuts for the well-off. But one man's tax cut is another man's benefit cut. It should shame us but it clearly
